His great grief is given to his parents and all the family in their bereavement.

At the onset of his February he experienced much freedom, rejoiced in the ground of his hope, and earnestly desired the salvation of souls. His few days of sickness and suffering will long be remembered by those who ministered to him. Not a doubt crossed his mind. He saw the nearly gates and his Saviour waiting to receive him, and closing his eyes he passed to his rest without a struggle or a groan.
