For several weeks more or less borin for coal has been done in the regions sur rounding Cochrane's Lake, several mile to the rear of Port Morien, with very little encouragement. Yesterday, how ever, the parties concerned were rewarded for their diligence and persistence by the discovery of a seam of coal nearly seven feet in thickness. Several local men are interested in this venture, and are backed up by influential New York cap-italists. The seam at Cochrane's Lake will no doubt be developed, and it is quite likely Sydney will be made the shipping terminal.—Sydney Post, 7th.

The I. C. R. water works at Point Tupper have been completed. This was a very heavy piece of work, the reservoir covering 13 acres and the pipes being laid for over two miles. A splendid supply of spring water has been secured, and the town of Hawkesbury, it is understood, is moving in the direction of getting water supply from the railway. The reservoir holds 25,000,000 gallons, sufficient to supply a town the size of Hawkesbury in addition to the railway requirements Theo. M. DeBlanc, of Moncton, had charge

HE DISCOVERED CORBETT.

FORMER MANAGER OF "POMPADOUR JIM" IS IN THE CITY.

Started the Californian on His Pugilistic Career-Bob Fitzsimmons Was Guided by Him Later--Some Ring Incidents.

W. R. Dailey, the man who was the first manager of Jim Corbett, ex-champion heavyweight pugilist of the world, is in the city. Mr. Dailey has broken away m the prize ring and its associatio and keeps as far as possible from all notables whose fame is largely dependent upon their bruising ability and whose fortime waxes and wanes with the growth or decrease of their brawn and knowledge of the game and it was with considerable reluctance that he brought to light for The Telegraph from memory's storehouse some of his experiences during the time he was business manager and agent of

"Gentleman Jim."

Mr. Dailey's connection with Corbett dates back to from 1887-1889. At that time he was editor of an illustrated sporting and dramatic weekly paper, The World, published in San Francisco, and was as well, western sporting representa-tive of the New York World and the Boston Globe-Corbett had already attained a local Corbett had already attained a local reputation for proficiency with the padded mits and was boxing instructor of the Olympic Athletic Club of San Francisco. He had experienced the pleasurable sensation of seeing his opponent counted out on more than one occasion as the result of inopportune collision with the gloved breakles of the Collifornian cladiator. Mr. knuckles of the Californian gladiator. Mr. Dailey, thoroughly versed in the game of the ring, saw at once that the boxing in-structor of the Olympic possessed gifts in his peculiar line which would stand him in good stead in his fighting climb up the ladder. For some years Mr. Dailey had made an especial study of pugilism and his let-ters to the press on general sporting topics written over the nom de plume of D. A. Lee were attracting more than local attention. He was covering the west as that other sporting authority, "The Bantam," was covering the south, and he saw in Corbett a golden opportunity. Accordingly, through his papers, he commenced to boom the Californian. Easteners soon learned that there was on the Pacific slope a gladiator of the squared circle big-ger than their biggest, better than their best. Just after Corbett's first battle with Choynski, Mr. Dailey took him under his especial care and closed negotiations with Bud Renaud for Corbett to box six Kilrain at that time practically owned the Crescent City, but after Corbett's visit thence to Brooklyn, where Mr. Dailey had secured for Corbett an engagement to fight Dominick McCaffrey. The fight materialized and again Pompadour Jim was an easy winner. After this Corbett was fairly on the ladder and his subsequent career is well known. Just when success was at its zenith and Corbett's fists were was at its zenth and Cornett's isso were winting many sheckles for him and his managers, Mr. Dailey and the big Cali-fornian had a business difference and then came the split. Cornett went his way and Mr. Dailey became manager of Bob Fitz-simmons, another champion. He con-tinued his relations with Fitz for ome time and managed a number of tours for him, on which occasions Fitz, met and de-feated all comers. Then Mr. Dailey took up Johnny Van Heest and Charley Kimmick and under his management they had much success.

"Kimmick," said Mr. Dailey, in talking to The Telegraph, "would have been the greatest welterweight in the world had he lived. Tommy Ryan refused to fight him time and time again." Mr. Dailey's withdrawal from prize ring matches was largely due to his expose of the Wier-Murphy fake fight and which membership in the California Athletic Club of 'Frisco, then the swell organiza-tion of the kind in the west. The night before the fight he got on the inside of a deal made with Wier, as a result of which Wier was to throw the fight to his op ponent. Mr. Dailey published his knowledge to the world through the columns of the papers he represented and seen he quit the game for good.

"I'm all through with it now," said he, "as I have other interests which demand my attention. The prize ring and its environment has no charm for me any more but— I've been in with the best of them

Crowe-Mahoney.

Sussex, July 1.—A very quiet but pretty wedding took place at St. Francis church here on June 25, when Bridgie L. Mahoney, of Poodiac, and William Crowe, of Haminond, were joined in the holy bonds of wedlock. The bride looked very becoming in a suit of pearl gray cloth trimmed with silk, hat and gloves to match. She was attended by her sister, Margaret L. Mahoney. The groom was supported by his brother, Jeremiah Crowe. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Savage. After the marriage ceremony the young couple, accompanied by their immediate relatives and friends, drove to the home of the bride's mother, where dinner was served. The young couple will reside in Hammond. Their many friends wish them a long and happy life.

Other consignments were held at Toronto and were sold at auction. There were to be sold at Sand Point between 100 and 110 horses but saveral were about him the horses but several were shot by

The first day's sale took place at the stock yards and was largely atended and the prices ranged from $20 to $80. Wed-nesday's sale was held at Smith & Co.'s stables and among the 47 horses sold were about 10 which are in what is termed "th juries, etc. Some of these animals wer sold for $7, while some of the more soun horses in the stables brought $80. As soon as the auctioneer would announce that a horse had been sold the highest bidder would settle up with the cash. This last lot of horses are not considered as fine a lot as were shipped to South Africa dur ing last winter or early spring.

Toronto, July 8—(Special)—The sale of imperial remount horses began here to day and will continue all week. About 150 were disposed of at average price of $45. About a dozen fetched more than $100. the highest price being $140.

For an Albert County Grammar School.

Hopewell Hill, July 7.-The Grammar school for Albert county has been located at Alma for about 20 years. During this period it has been efficiently managed by Thos. E. Colpits, B. A. A change is about to be made in the location of this school. The trustees of Alma have had notice from the chief superintendent of education that their time tor holding the Albert county

Grammar school will terminate June 30, If the villages of Albert and Riverside unite the amalgamation will make one large school with the promise of grammar school, to take effect in one year. This is a most excellent scheme. At the present time each village has old dilapidated school buildings and to replace them with new structures will entail a larger expen-diture than having one central school. A still greater combination is proposed, tak-ing Hopewell Hill into the union. Greater union, greater strength. The people of these districts are showing a progressive spirit by the combination that is being suggested. Sackville has this year adopted a similar combination by which they will have a central school almost equal to an academy. By this Albert-Riverside-Hope-well Hill combination all three villages will be benefitted but probably Riverside, by its central position, will derive the greatest benefit. By having the grammar school at or near Riverside, apart from educational facilities, there will be a finan-cial side that will interest the place in which the school is located. This school will be in advance of all others in the county and larger and more advanced pupils preparing for matriculation will make this a preparatory school. There will be no other school in the county scholars from Elgin, Hillsboro, Alma and any other place in the county. These pupils must be boarded in the vicinity. All this have the opportunity of catering to them All these things tend to help any village Riverside is one of the nicest village that can be found in the province and contains some handsome residences among which may be mentioned that of ex-Gov ernor McClelan. The proposed gramma school building will be another worthy acquisition. It will be a lasting benefit to the children and thus improve the place for future generations.
