

CARROLL O'DONOGHUE.

CHAPTER XVIII. A STREET ARAB.

It was only a street accident: the overturning of a gig driven tandem, and the dashing away of the frightened horses with the broken vehicle. The owner of the turn-out had singularly and his swiftness in presence of mind escaped, owing to his presence of mind and his swiftness in presence of mind...

Tighe a Vohr, passing at the time, had witnessed the whole of the accident, and he was the first to lift the little prostrate form. The boy was not insensible, but the wound in his head from which the blood was flowing profusely, and the death-like color of his face, bespoke no light injury.

"I have no home, but don't let them take me to the hospital," he whispered, striving to smile at the friendly face above him; and Tighe, touched to the heart by the gentle, mournful look in the soft, dark eyes, and the pleading in the faint voice, was puzzled how to grant the boy's request. He was not long, however, in having one of his sudden, bright thoughts.

Corny O'Toole's bachelor apartment was in the next street—a few seconds' walk would bring him there; and, without pausing to think what Corny's opinion on the subject might be, or what kind of a welcome the latter might accord the injured stranger, he resolved to bear his burden thence, trusting to his ingenuity for mollifying the old man's temper should it be unpleasantly aroused.

"Back," he cried to the crowd now pressing about him, "leave the way!" speaking angrily to some of the foremost, who with impertinent curiosity were thrusting themselves in his face. His sturdy demeanor showed that he would enforce his order, and the crowd made a passage for him, dropping sundry remarks as he went.

"The craythur it must be his brother; an' a purty woman he is! The Lord be tunc us! hurrum, but it's little we know from one day to another what'll overtake us!" Tighe, paying little attention to the observations, hurried on with his burden, Shaun closely following him. Mr. O'Toole had the same look and bold aspect as the man who had knocked at his door at the occasion of the latter's previous visit; but Tighe's voice pleading for speedy admission seemed to hasten to the little man's movements.

"I'm afeard he's killed, Corny—the beautiful little lad!" began Tighe, the moment the door was fairly opened, and he brushed by the astounded Mr. O'Toole to the bed which stood in a curtained corner of the room. Placing his burden gently upon it, he continued: "There was no other place to take him, Corny, an' I minded how me mother used to tell o'er tender heart for the poor an' the distressed, so I med up me mind to bring him here, an' we'll nurse him, Corny, you an me, till he gets well."

"That's all right, Mr. O'Toole," said Tighe, as the little man, with a grateful look, struck home as the sly Tighe a Vohr knew it would do. Mr. O'Toole was by the bedside in a moment.

"Get me some wather," said Tighe, "an' we'll wash this out the first thing—see how deep it is; an' mebbe we could get him well agin widout havin' recourse to a docther; for docthers, bad luck to them, are only discesin' set; they'll take yer money while you're livin' an' yer body while you're dead."

Corny was obedient to all the directions, looking on with a sort of stupid wonder at the skill and quickness with which Tighe attended to the patient. The tender-hearted fellow's hand was as gentle as a woman's, and the patient little sufferer expressed his gratitude by a frequent effort to smile.

The cut was not so deep as Tighe had feared, and by the time it was carefully washed and the soft, thick, curling hair cropped from about it, it seemed to need no more than a simple bandage. The boy lay back on the pillow with a sigh of relief, and closed his eyes; indeed, fatigue, more than pain, seemed to distress him, and Tighe drew the curtains, and motioning Corny to follow him, stole to a distant part of the room.

"I don't know one thing about him, Corny," explained Tighe in a whisper, "only I saw the horses dash him under their feet, an' I was frightened intirely; but when I lifted him, it wint to me heart the way he told me that he had no home, an' the look wid which he eyed me not to let him take him to the hospital. That's the whole of it, Corny; but oh, won't me mother be pleased when I tell her o'er yer noble goodness this day!"

"Pshaw!" said the little man, trying to cover by affected indifference the glow of pleasure into which he was thrown by the last words.

"A few days' rest," continued Tighe, "will make him all right; an' now, Corny, I have a word to tell you about meesel."

Mr. O'Toole drew his chair closer, and very affectionately patted Shaun, who was sitting gravely between them. The allusion to Mick Carmody had made him well disposed to take an active interest in everything pertaining to Tighe a Vohr.

Tighe continued, still in a whisper; "The young master is so strictly guarded that not one at all'll be let to see him, an' Father Mearner an' the young ladies had to go back to Droghmacool yesterday the same as the team, without one, eight o' him. Well, Mr. Garfield—"

"The quartermaster that I wrote the letter to in the Widow Moore's name?" interrupted Mr. O'Toole.

"The very same, Corny; an' right well yer letter was received; he doesn't believe to this day that there's a bit o' a joke in the matter; an' what wid his own consintin' on bein' where the widdy is, an' followin' her loike a ghost, he's the sport o' the town; an' she's the hate; the sight o' him as the devil hates wather. Oh, but I'm could it's a sight to behold her freazin' looks at him, an' the crowd shoouldn't give him any way, an' he, poor omadhaun, think it's all right bekeise we would him so in the letter. You mind the contents o' the letter, Corny?"

"I do," said Mr. O'Toole, with a glow of pride. "Well," resumed Tighe, "her brother Jack isn't a whit better than herself; he's down on the poor fool o' a quarter-master too, an' he's been thyrin' to make all sorts o' sport o' him. He succeeded in makin' him bet himself, an' get the bets o' his friends, on a horse that has the thrick o' goin' lame be- times when there's to be a race; an' now for this race that's comin' off in a wate or so, poor Garfield hasn't a horse nor a rider, an' he'll be out a hundred pounds or so; besides bein' the manes o' his friends losin' also. Are you takin' it all in, Corny?"

"I am," answered that gentleman with a very solemn air. "Well, whin I heard that, an' heard, too, that the master's friends wouldn't get nigh nor nigh him, an' also that the master himself will be kept here a month, I just wint to work thinkin'—hard thinkin', Corny."

"I am," answered that gentleman with a very solemn air. "Well, whin I heard that, an' heard, too, that the master's friends wouldn't get nigh nor nigh him, an' also that the master himself will be kept here a month, I just wint to work thinkin'—hard thinkin', Corny."

Tighe paused, and looked sharply into the listener's face, as if to question what the latter's surmise would be regarding the result of his severe cogitations. Mr. O'Toole, by way of answer, spread both his hands firmly upon his knees, bent his body forward, and looked as sharply into Tighe's face, his look expressing: "What did you think?"

"Me thinkin' kem to this, Corny: that if I could find another horse an' a rider for Mr. Garfield, in his gratitude he might find a way for us all to get seein' the master."

"Timothy Carmody, I'm proud of you!" the little man stood up, and shook Tighe's hand; "you are your mother's own son, and you deserve to be Timothy O'Toole."

He had forgotten in his eagerness his previous whispered tones, and had spoken aloud; but Tighe pointed to the bed, and put his finger on his lip, and Mr. O'Toole, having wiped his face, and given a careful twist to his sidelocks, sat down.

"It was aisy enough to think so far," resumed Tighe, bringing his mouth in close proximity to Corny's ear, "but it was the devil's own job to think where I'd get the horse, an' to get them some way for our own races afore the master was transported; an' I'm thinkin' now I'll have to do what I used to do thim- take the hind o' a horse widout axin' the owner's lave, an' hould meesel' prepared to be a martyr for the consequences."

"But how will you take the time to find the horse, an' to ride him in the race, engaged as you are at present?" said Corny, pointing significantly to Tighe's dress.

"Lave me alone for that," answered Tighe a Vohr; "Shaun here,"—affectionately placing his hand on the dog—"was the manes o' managin' it for me. Faith, I don't know what I'd do at all widout Shaun!"—turning a look expressive of the fondest regard on the straggly animal. "I shpoke to Captain Donnell this very mornin' about lavin' his services. He was the surprisedest man I ever seen, Corny. 'Lave me!' he says, 'what for? An' you thared well!'"

"I am, yer honor," said Tighe, "betther tharment I could wish for; an' if it was restin' wid meesel', I'd be content to staid wid yer honor always."

"Well, what is the trouble?" he asked then; "tell me plainly, Tighe."

"This, Corny, I purtinded to be awful shy intirely, an' to be sort o' distressed loike; an' to restore me confidence, an' to make me feel aisy afore him, he bid me take a saite, an' he took one himself, an' he sez:—"

"You know, Tighe, I promised Captain Crawford to provide for you, an' I'd loike to kape me word; besides, I'm pleased wid you meesel' an' I'd loike you to staid."

"I would, yer honor," I answered, "but the life in the barracks doesn't suit Shaun at all."

"Oh, Tighe," interrupted Mr. O'Toole, "you didn't say that!"

"The devil a lie in it, Corny; I said that wid as sober a face as I have this minit, an' I wint on, while the captain sat bolt upright in his chair, an' looked at me as if he thought I had lost my senses; 'Shaun, sez I, 'is a delicate dog, an' what wid the excitin' sight o' the soldiers, he's gettin' thin and worrisome. He was always used to the country, an' to plenty o' liberty, an' I'll have to go away wid him for a few days."

"Thin the captain sez: 'Well, Tighe, if I give you lave of absence for a wate, 'nothin' less than two waked days, Shaun's strin' is run down, an' he requires particular tharment.'"

"Well, take the two waked, sez he. So here I am, Corny, wid two waked holiday before me, an' a good aisy place at me back."

"There was a faint call from the curtained corner. Both Tighe and Corny were instantly at the bedside, and Mr. O'Toole drew his chair closer, and very affectionately patted Shaun, who was sitting gravely between them. The allusion to Mick Carmody had made him well disposed to take an active interest in everything pertaining to Tighe a Vohr.

Tighe continued, still in a whisper; "The young master is so strictly guarded that not one at all'll be let to see him, an' Father Mearner an' the young ladies had to go back to Droghmacool yesterday the same as the team, without one, eight o' him. Well, Mr. Garfield—"

"The quartermaster that I wrote the letter to in the Widow Moore's name?" interrupted Mr. O'Toole.

"The very same, Corny; an' right well yer letter was received; he doesn't believe to this day that there's a bit o' a joke in the matter; an' what wid his own consintin' on bein' where the widdy is, an' followin' her loike a ghost, he's the sport o' the town; an' she's the hate; the sight o' him as the devil hates wather. Oh, but I'm could it's a sight to behold her freazin' looks at him, an' the crowd shoouldn't give him any way, an' he, poor omadhaun, think it's all right bekeise we would him so in the letter. You mind the contents o' the letter, Corny?"

throw himself back exhausted on his pillow. Tighe would have drawn the curtains and left him, but the little fevered hand again grasped him. "Stay," whispered the boy, "I shall be better in a moment, and I can tell you."

He did rally, and Tighe was forced to hear him. "I am to take this paper,"—holding up the letter,—("in Droghmacool, and give it to some one there that call Rick of the Hills.")

Tighe no longer bade the boy desist; he was listening now with most eager attention, and he told me such beautiful things about God and His blessed mother that I used to think she must have been in Heaven herself to know so much of them. She lived with her aunt and her cousin, a young man as kind-hearted as herself; but he went away to join the boys when the news of the rising came, and never very long after a letter came from a priest, saying that these dead—he had been shot in some fight with the soldiers. Oh, then was the time of grief for Cathleen and her poor old aunt, for she was the young man's mother. Their hearts seemed to be breaking, and once in a while I'd hear a word dropped that told me how they were aching to know more particulars of his death; and then it got into my head that if the priest who wrote the letter, and who said in the letter how he was present at the death-bed of William Kelly, could come to see them it would console them entirely. I did say to Cathleen that she and her aunt ought to make a journey to see the priest, but she seemed to be some queer thing hanging over it all, as if there was a secret reason to prevent the journey. When I saw that I made up my own mind to make a journey myself to this priest unknown to any one. Quite carelesslike I got out of Cathleen the name of the priest, and the place he was in, and the way one might take to get to him, and I started, sometimes begging him, and sometimes aiming it. I only got here yesterday, and I happened on Boolahan's place to beg a meal. One of the women there was very kind to me, and she gave me a lodging and fine meals, and I told her where I was bound for, but I didn't tell her my business. That was yesterday evening, and this mornin' she came running in to me when I was at my breakfast, saying that there was a gentleman outside who wanted a message carried to a place that I'd have to pass through on my way to see Father O'Connor."

"Father O'Connor!" interrupted Tighe, his face and attitude expressing his thrilling interest in the artlessly-told tale.

"Yes; do you know him?" questioned the boy.

"I have seen him," answered Tighe evasively, not knowing how prudent it might be for him to say more until he had heard the conclusion of the story.

"Well, I went out to see the gentleman, and he seemed pleased with my harangue, and he gave me the note at once, and said to me what I told you before. And now I'll rest."

He was very tired; not even the tea which Corny had more neatly prepared than would have been deemed possible from his slovenly surroundings, and of which the injured boy largely partook, seemed able to delay even for a moment the weary man into which he sunk. Judging rightly that repose would benefit him most, Tighe partially closed the curtains again, and left the bedside. He motioned to Corny.

"They say all's fair in love an' war," he whispered, "an' as I'm at war wid our readin' this." He opened the paper and put it into Corny's hand. The latter seemed to take a similar view of the case, for without any hesitation he softly read:

"Rick—I have decided to go to Dublin, and the sooner I go the better it'll be for my own interests. I promised Ned Malony a fortnight ago that I'd be down there in time to bring his horse coming off next week; but I can't do that now. He'll have to bring the horse up himself. Show him this note, and he'll be glad to have no fear. Joe Canty is booked to ride him, and it will be time enough to have the horse in Blenner's stable the day before the race. Tell him the stakes are all right, and that we have heavy backers. And do you, Rick, keep sober, and when I return, be prepared to do what I told you."

Yours,
MORTIMER CARTER."

TO BE CONTINUED.

"THE DISEASE proceeds silently and unapparent health." That is what Wm. Roberts, M. D., Physician to the Manchester Infirmary and Lupton Hospital, Professor of Medicine in Owen's College, says in regard to Bright's Disease. If it necessary to give any further warning! If not use Warner's Safe Cure before your kidney malady becomes too far advanced.

THE JESUITS.

SIX LETTERS IN THEIR DEFENCE.

LETTER V.
The learned English divine, Whitaker, in his famous vindication of Queen Mary, says, 'PROBATION (I think for the honour of Protestantism while I write) seems to have been peculiar to the reformed. I look in vain for one of these accursed outrages of imposition among the disciples of Popery.' (Vind. vol 11, p. 2)

The equally respectable writer, Hallam, of whose high testimony I have already extensively availed myself, in that chapter of his work (Literature of the Middle Ages) which treats of the logical literature in Europe from 1520 to 1550, also asserts thus: "The adherents of the Church of Rome have never failed to cast two reproaches on those who left them: one, that the Reforms was brought about by intemperate and calumnious abuse, by outrages of an excited populace, or by the tyranny of Princes; the other, that, after stimulating the most ignorant to reject the authority of their Church, it instantly withdrew this liberty of judgment, and devoted all who presumed to swerve from the line drawn by law, to virulent obloquy, or sometimes to stripes and death. These reproaches, it may be shown to us to own, cannot be uttered, but cannot be refuted."

One would think that the fact of the existence of such Protestant authority as this against the common mode of attack upon the Catholic Church and her clergy, if it did not deter, would at least render cautious, an intelligent Protestant, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion of those infamous charges against that Church and clergy, which were so long the disgrace of the Protestant press, and Protestant pulpit. Not so, however: men are still to be found who fearlessly undertake such fearful work, who, notwithstanding the declarations of Protestants of the most distinguished of Protestants, in whose mind a desire might arise of giving fresh currency to any portion