

the question

By STUART MOSCOE

Now that Pierre Trudeau has resigned, who do you think would make a good leader of the Liberal party?

Vince Ros, Poli Sci I

"Political strategists are pointing to Turner. He seems to be the most logical choice."

Maurizio Barbieri, Mass comm I

"Turner, because he's as charismatic as Trudeau was 16 years ago."

David Wiechorek, Film I

"Margaret Trudeau should be the next leader because she's good friends with Mick Jagger."

David Cooper, Ed IV

"John Turner, because the Liberal party needs an image divorced from Trudeau."

Henry Zech, Econ II

"Jean Cretien. He's been loyal to the party through the good times and the bad times, unlike John Turner."

Rob Cesario, Business II

"Turner, because he's a conservative Liberal; he'll get some support in the West."

Ian Lebane, Econ I

"I'd like to see the hypocritical Monique Begin because her Canada Health Act typifies the disgusting propensity of the Liberals to play on the fears of the average Canadian."

Don Gordon, President YPC

"To their own advantage, the Liberals must coronate Turner as the last English-Canadian Liberal hope because of his profile, and quasi-conservative economic policies."
