ONTARIO RECIPROCITY VIEW

(Toronto Sun)

On Saturday the United States Senate passed the reciprocity agreement without amendment, and by an overwhelming majority. President Taft has thus completed, in perfect good faith, the understanding to which he was a party. All that is required now to ensure complete free trade between these two neighboring countries, in so far as agricultural products are concerned, is that the Dominion Parliament shall do what Congress has already done—accept the agreement as it stands.

Had the statement been made any time within the last sixty years, and up to six months ago, that so simple an act would secure so great a boon it would have been taken as tantamount to saying the boon was already assured. Up to that time both political parties in this country were in favor of what can now be had by merely reaching out the hand. It was one of the grievances which the predecessors of the men now opposing reciprocity had against the British government in '49 that it had failed to secure the opening of the American market to Canadian farm products. From that time on until it seemed hopeless to ask our neighbors for better trade relations the only difference between the two parties in this country was as to the means to be taken, or the length to be gone, in order to ensure the opening of American cities to Canadian farm products. The defence for a premature dissolution of Parliament, when Sir John A. Macdonald made his last appeal to the Canadian people, was that he desired a mandate for negotiations looking to reciprocity. There was no thought of change from the attitude thus defined, provided Americans were willing to negotiate, until this year.

Why the Change?

Why the change now? The American market proved of untold value to Canadian farmers under the reciprocity treaty of 1854. It was of immense advantage even under the moderate American tariff that prevailed until 1888. It would be vastly more beneficial now because meantime the food consuming population of the United States has grown out of all proportion to the food producing population. The cities of Chicago, Port Huron, Detroit, Cleveland, Toledo, Buffalo, Niagara Falls, Rochester and New York have meantime multiplied their population over and over again. The great iron and coal industries of Pennsylvania have been developed. All these great centres are within easy reach by phone from Canadian farms. The produce of these farms can be collected one day and turned into cash the next. In the face of a duty of 25 per cent. the most valuable ear of horses taken out of Durham county last year were sold in New York. A slight reduction in the duty on cream caused Ontario's exports of dairy products to the United States to jump from a mere nothing to some $3,000,000 in a few months. Even in the lines in which it was feared injury might be caused there will be benefit as shown by the fact that American buyers have scoured all Ontario this season for berries and cherries, despite a duty of one cent per quart on the former and 25 per cent. on the latter, with which to supply American demand.

Still there is hesitation. Why? Annexation? The securing of reciprocity in '54 killed the annexation movement that arose in '49. A prosperous people never clamor for political change, and it is abundantly clear that reciprocity will add to the prosperity of those on whom the whole industrial superstructure rests—the farmers.

Why, then, the opposition? There are honest objections to the measure; the objections of men unconsciously actuated by partisanship or misled by incorrect information. But the origin and chief strength of the opposition is wholly selfish. It comes originally from the Flavell, who fear that under reciprocity they may have to pay more for hogs, and so be unable to secure dividends running up to 120 per cent.; from captains of finance like the Aitkens, who fear that in some way the floating of mergers, which have made millionaires of the few, may be made less easily possible; from the Van Hornes and the Mackenzies, who have been enriched by subsidies and grinding freight rates extorted from the Canadian people, and who fear that with free trade in farm products there may be freer trade in transportation as well.

Is it with these interests, or with the Canadian people, that politicians who are opposing what the farmers of all Canada have long prayed for wish to be identified in the popular mind? Choose ye this day whom you will serve.
