TORONTO, June 10, 1850.

The Welland Canal excursion is over. For any part, I desire never to be caught on such a "pleasure" trin again. All the calculations of the projection of the excursion proved erroneous. We did not reach Buffalo till Saturdey morning, not withstanding the most extensive arrangements had been made to give the company a public reception. In fact, the whole thing was failure—tadious, irixome, annoying. But I must enter a little into detail.

The hour of departure was changed from for the part of the state of the a failure—tedious irksome, amorying. But I must enter a little into detail.

The hour of departure was changed from five to seven. Lord Elgin was about the last to come on board. That was the first blunder. Between 50 and 70 members of the two Houses of Parliament, of whom nearly all were members of the Assembly, with 52 clerks belonging to the various Public Departmenta, and some dozen members of the Press, embarked in the steamer Chief Justice Robinson on Friday morning last for the Welland Canal. The morning was bright and benutiful. The boat had not been chartered, and, in addition to the distinguished personages already mentioued, there was a large number of ordinary passengers. After a passage of ordinary quickness, of which the only notable occurrence was the unusually great protraction "of the time of consuming breakfast," from the inadequacy of accommodation for the requirements of the occasion. We reached Port Dalbousie, at the mouth of the Canal. Here we were greated by discharges of cannon. Mr. Merritt, who had gone over the previous day, here joined the company. The band of the Canadian Rifles came on board. Mr. Thorburn, and some others, came upon the deck of the steamer, and presented an Address to the Governor General, to which His Excellency read his Reply. We proceeded, and in a short timy arrive 45.565y Thai

We beg to direct attention to the Performance of the Martinette family, at Monklands Hotel, this afternoon, and hope to find that Mr. Compain will be encouraged in his efforts to afford amusement and healthful serrestion; he has spared no expense to give every accommodation that can be desired, and we feel convinced that there is not a more and his Majesty was removed, by his own express desire, back to Charlott aburg.

The constables and bystanders rushed upon the culprit, felled him to the ground, and torefoom his hand the still-smoking pistol. Some assert that he exclaimed, 'Long live Liberty!' others, that he at first called out, pretending to be mad, 'I as a Prince of Syria, or Barbary;' but that, on being somewhat roughly handled and pressed, he declared bimself to be an ex-sergeant of artillery, in native of Weltzer, discharged on the last of Octaberlast; and that he had borrowed the uniform, which he was not entitled to wear, for the purpose; of gaining nearer access to the royal person. The assastiuntderwent a short examination, from which it appeared that he was well-know to be a man of indifferent character and exc. table disposition. The Minister of Police having also arrived, the register was delivered into his hands, placed in, a closed post van, and conducted to the new prison of Mosbit, under a strong escert. There he will be kept as secret, closely watched, and deprived of all means of committing self-destruction. Intelligence of this must detestable crime attracted hundreds to the station, which was, however, quickly cleared of all persons whose presence was not required. Hundreds upbe hundreds collected outside, animated with a spirit of indignation and digust, and they cheered, when, in the course of about three quarters of an hour, the King, seated in his charlo', and support d by that most atmiable and excellent lady the Queen, drove through the gates, on their return to Charlotte burg.

"The ball appears to have passed close within the inner epidermis, and not to have injured a serve or artery, and only to have increase the few man in attendance upon his Majesty. The excellent lady the Queen, droves through the gain of the intelligence given above; and the Staats Anaeiger corroborates, in a short official articles, signed by the Minister of the laterior, the principal fact.—The three eminent men above manitured, remain in at

THE CRITICAL POSITION OF APPARES.

This evening is the last time we shall hear this beautiful Band, and all lovers of music, such as has never been heard before in Montreal, will regret its departure. A rich bill of fare is to be served up to the admiring audience. Among the pieces, we particularly notice the Overture "King of the Two Stricts of the Music Prench Horn, by Kuestenmachet; a Symphony, the "Consecration of Tones," by Spohr; and a "Potpourri," descriptive of New York, in which some Canadian Melodies will be introduced.
