Maori housewives of New Zealand, have discovered, like their more civilized sisters, the value of the fireless cooker as a labor saver but their cooks have neither to be made or ordered. Nature furnishes them in inexhaustible supply, for they are nothing more nor less than the small geysers of the region. Using a box, a basket, or a bag, depending on what they are cooking, the women sink the receptacle in the moist mud over a steam hole, which makes an admirable oven. They not only cook their meals, but do their washing in these baby volcanoes.—The Argonaut.

A largely attended and most enjoyable Talent tea under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid of Alexandra Church was held at the residence of Mrs. Andrew L. Baird, Murray St., yesterday afternoon. Vocal solos were given by Mrs. Barton and Miss Heamans; instrumental selections by Misses Lorene Corey and Amy Lyle. The proceeds amounted to a substantial sum. The affair was in charge of the members residing north of Colborne street, who with the hostess are to be congratulated on the successful outcome.

Plea for tariff action that would destroy the hook and eye industry and relieve married men of fastening the backs of their wives' gowns, was made in the Democratic caucus to-day at Washington by Representative Thomas, of Kentucky.

"It would be better for the peace and happiness of married men," he said, "if there were no hooks and eyes. If a free list will destroy the industry, I am putting them on the free list."

"Any man who will fumble with the hooks and eyes in buttoning up the back of his wife's dress, is not much of a man," he said.

His appeal was ignored.

Thoroughly enjoyable and very largely attended was the Golf Club Bridge which claimed the Ladies' Match Committee as hostesses yesterday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. Frank Leeming, Dufferin Ave. The game commenced shortly after three o'clock and twelve tables were played. The prizes for high score, second and lowest score were won by Miss Lottie Large, Mrs. E. A. Mabon and Mrs. Watson, (Toronto). Light refreshments were served about half past four. Mrs. H. R. Yates and Mrs. F. D. Reville presiding at the tea urns; then the game resumed until six o'clock when the scores were counted up and the prizes given.

Carpets and Curtains Linoleums and Window Shades

The annual church social of the members of Park Baptist church was held last evening. In numbers and in general enjoyment the social probably ranks among the best in the history of the church. At seven o'clock in the neighborhood of three hundred sat down to carefully prepared supper. Later about fifty more gathered to listen to the splendid program in the auditorium. Mrs. A. G. Olive, who presided, and the splendid corps of ladies who assisted Mrs. Olive, deserve great credit for the efficient way they handled their part of the program.

The Programme

Rev. Mr. Rose, who occupied the chair, at the close of the social spoke optimistically concerning the future welfare of the church. Brief addresses were given by Messrs S. G. Read, J. H. Hall, John H. Campbell and John Muir. Mr. S. G. Read very ably gave the history of the bible school.

The Music

The choir which was present in full force, under the directorship of Mr. J. R. Cornelius, rendered several very pleasing numbers. Mr. Roberts sang a solo. He has a very pleasing voice and manner, and the congregation were delighted with his number. The young ladies class, called the Philatheo class, sang its rally song. About forty young ladies took part. This is a new feature at the annual social event of the church. The gathering was well pleased with the singing of the young ladies.

The deacons and their wives formed the reception committee for the evening.

Home of Rockefeller.

Up the hill, past Sleepy Hollow, lying on two sides of a distant ridge, are the heights of Pocantico Hills. In the green Kent House with its square tower and gothic decorations, lives Mr. John D. Rockefeller, on the border of his estate while the new gray stone house on the summit is being completed.

The home was in keeping with the simple tastes of the man. In the corner of the hall were flowers—just the old fashioned late flowers of autumn; hollyhocks and chrysanthemums. There was the usual hall rack with hats and caps. A photograph of a group on the golf links, showing Mr. Rockefeller in his best golf fettle, was near the entrance, and in the adjoining room pictures of Lincoln and Washington made it seem like an old-fashioned American home. A cheery fire was glowing in the grate inside, and on the table were magazines, books and newspapers in friendly array. It was all cozy and homelike, such as any man of moderate means might well enjoy. Promptly at the hour appointed, Mr. Rockefeller came down stairs. He was attired in a gray cutting suit, trousers rolled up, and was wrapped in a gray sweater, with a golf cap set squarely atop, as though ready to eclipse his best record. As the single guest of the golf "gallery," I was armed with a paper vest to keep out the chilling wind, while while waiting to watch the colliate game of golf.

"Now, we're ready," quoth the host leading, the way to the green. "Louey," the Italian caddy, with a heavy moustache and genial eye, pinched the sand and perched the ball. After one or two sweeps with his club, Mr. Rockefeller sent the ball circling through the tree toward the green, like a bird seeking its nesting place. It was a prime drive, and Mr. Rockefeller turned to me, his eye gleaming with the satisfaction of a man who has accomplished his purpose. Henry, the colored man, as the advance guard, held up the targets, showing the location of each hole. "Where is it going, Henry?" called Mr. Rockefeller, after a drive. "Is it all right, Henry?"

"Yaas, sah, I guess it struck the green all right," shouted back the good natured advance scout, "and hit's still going yit."—A Day With John D. Rockefeller. Joe Mitchell Chapter in National Magazine.

"Don't marry a man who says he will die of a broken heart if you don't marry him. I have attended a great many funerals, but never one of that kind."

"Don't marry a man in the hope of reforming him. When he says he will give up all his bad habits after you are married he is lying though he may not know it."

"Don't marry a man who is avowedly ungodly. Let him find some one else as godless as himself."

"Don't marry a man until you know who he is and where he comes from. One will not engage a cook or a house servant without recommendations, yet many a woman marries a man without knowing the least thing about his antecedents."

"Don't marry a man you know to be selfish. Don't expect perfection in a husband or you will be disappointed."

These were some of the "don't's" given to the women of his congregation recently by the Rev. Dr. Samuel Woodrow, pastor of the First Congregational church of Buffalo.

"It is generally best that a woman should marry and have a home," Dr. Woodrow said. "A woman develops in a happy home of her own as nowhere else. I applaud the woman who remains single rather than marry some unworthy man or be joined in a loveless union."

School of Dressmaking.

For a few weeks only Mrs. Atterbury will be at the Kerby House on Saturday of each week to make arrangements with anyone desiring to take lessons—have patterns cut, or make forms. Call or phone any evening from 7 to 9.

Gee, These Giant

H

The New York Giants look to and ought to be a stronger club this last year. This conclusion is logical not so much from what the team has actually shown this spring, but from what it is capable of doing.

A certain conservative and headed member of the squad was talking on the prospects of the team and had no hesitancy in saying that he looked for another championship.

"We ought to win like a breeze," he says, "and I shall be much disappointed if we don't."

"The dope all points to our winning the pennant again. One of our strongest assets is the way we have fortified against accidents. I don't see how anything but a bad accident can keep us from winning, as we have such good players to take the place of any regular who may be incapacitated that we are admirably protected. The real strength of a ball team and that which wins pennants is the reserve men, and there the Giants are well fixed."

"The Giants are a young team. There isn't regular on it, in the field, outfield or behind the bat, who is not a young man. None of the Boston—The Athletics' infield as a secretary able to make friends with the Royal Rooters.

Athletics—The Boston outfield, and other Cy Morgan and a long drive spell for Bender.

Washington—A new wing for Ted Hughes, a pair of new lamps to be Cashion locate the plate, a second baseman, a 320 outfielder, the "breaks" in luck and a banner season for Walter Johnson.

Cleveland—Another Vean Gregg, one Mathewson, a high gear on the base lines, and the motto: "Remember, the noodle was made not for soup, but to think with."

Chicago—Fewer press notices more base hits, a Lord without grouch and three other big infielders (N.B.—If Ed Walsh could pitch every day the team would do).

Detroit—A first second and third baseman, an outfielder and the more Mullins, Jennings has all the rest of the material needed.
