DANGER IN EATING.

A New York woman, heated by the work of canning berries, drank great quantities of ice water, a thirst-quenching rather than a thirst-quenching drink. For supper she had ham and cabbage, more ice water and sliced cucumbers. In the evening she went out for a stroll and had ice cream and candy. She died before morning in great agony, of ptomaine poisoning.

The poisonous ptomaines, which may have been present in the ham or in the ice cream, probably would not have killed her under ordinary circumstances, suggests the Detroit Journal. There were contributing causes. Beginning with the nerve shocking and unsatisfying ice water, this woman proceeded to ham, a smoked meat difficult to digest, and with little nutrition; sliced cucumbers, very indigestible, though undoubtedly cooling, and more ice water. Then in the evening she had ice cream. This charming and nutritive confection has one danger, the easy formation of poisonous ptomaines. She had candy, and this good, though heat producing.

It was not her dieting, according to the report, that killed the young woman, but the poisons. Yet her diet, with almost no food value, certainly gave her nothing with which to resist illness. It is the season of lettuce and new peas, tomatoes have appeared, cauliflower, asparagus and many other vegetables are on the market, milk and cream are at their best, and fish, fowl, cereals and all lighter foods are abundant.

At the same time, the table has its dangers and the lunch counter even more of them. Excursionists and those overheated in tows envy the banana skin, and drinks with a large proportion of aggressive acids are worse than the wine when it is red. As one sees the fickle watermelon flitting as of old, and butterbeans in the grocer's basket, we remember that it is time to guard one's self a little bit, and maybe not eat anything at all until the weather cools. It's warm work to eat, anyway.

A MOTHER'S DEVOTION.

Brockville Times.

A wonderful example of heroism and maternal love was that recent incident of the woman at New Lis-bear who, in order to save her little child from death, thrust her arm beneath the wheels of the freight train and prevented the child from raising its head. Ordinary cases of heroic deeds performed under the stress of great excitement seem tame compared to this act of motherly devotion.

THE DEAD ONE

Breathes there a man with soul so dead,

Who never to himself hath said:
"My trade of late is getting bad,
I'll try another ten-inch ad?"

It is true, he, go, mark him well,
For him no bank account shall swell.

No angels watch the golden stair,
To welcome home the millionaire,
The man who never asks for trade
By local line or ad displayed.

Cares more for rest than worldly gain,
And patronage but gives him pain.
Tread lightly, friends; let no rude sound
Disturb his solitude profound;

Here let him rest in calm repose,
Unmolested except by men he owes,
And when he dies go plant him deep
That naught may break his dreamless sleep.

Where no rude clamor may dispel
The quiet that he loved so well;
And that the world may know its loss,
Place on his grave a wreath of moss

And on the stone above, "Here lies
A man who did not advertise."

ERIEAU

Miss Maud Banning, who has been spending a few days with Miss Bessie McKee, has returned home.

Mr. Robt. Hoig is with his family at Jubilee.

Mrs. C. C. Greshing, is visiting in Blenheim.

What's the matter with a cement sidewalk on the north side of the track. We have the sand handy here.

Mrs. Cudmore, formerly of Chatham, is the guest of Mrs. James Glenn, at Killarney.

Ted Bogart, one of the most indefatigable fishermen on the bar, had his efforts rewarded yesterday with a fine string of bass and pike, and Ernest Briscoe landed nine bass, weighing from one to three pounds, between 5.30 and 7 a. m.

Mrs. T. L. McRitchie and daughter, Miss Gladys, arrived at the Eau today for a visit.

Misses Helen Pilkey and Marguerite King went to Shrewsbury yesterday.

Mrs. Frank Dell is paying Mrs. James Gray a visit.

Miss Abram went to Chatham yesterday to attend the funeral of the Fergus Duncan.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Lugaden, of Toronto, are the guests of his brother, W. H. Lugaden.

Mr. Fellows brought a crowd over from the Park the other night, on the Togo, to enjoy the band concert.

Fishing is improving here as the season draws on, and the last two or three days the fish have been biting much better. It was thought by some that there would be a scarcity of fish here, as fishermen have been hauling them out in seines since early spring.

CHARMED WITH THE CITY

periences is what I am anxious to get.

"Well, young man, in reply I might say off-hand that I am an ex-officer of the Revenue Cutter service of the United States of America. I have retired from active service after 38 years in harness. During my time I have done duty from Portland, Maine, to the far Arctic Ocean. I might say that the International Fish Boundary Treaty was arranged for Canada and United States by Captain Dunn and myself a few years ago. We sat three weeks on the question, and finally managed to settle it amicably and to the satisfaction of both Governments. We found that the former water boundaries were all out of kilter, and we did considerable straightening up. The job was done without a hitch anywhere.

"I saw active service during the Spanish-American war and also with the Indians in Alaska. My active service in Alaska was during the year 1878, when I was third lieutenant. In the Spanish-American war I was with the Cutter McCullough, which was the first vessel to run across Manila Bay, after the famous battle on that body of water. We carried despatches to Admiral Dewey, and during a portion of the trip we had to hug in close to the shore, as we were under hot fire all the time.

"If you understand, these cutters are small crafts which draw about twelve or thirteen feet of water, and they have to do much of the preliminary work in naval battles. In this way they are almost constantly under fire, as their work is mostly along the enemies' shores. Once in particular we got in a hot place.

A section of our men had been detailed to cut a Spanish cable. While they were at the work, Spanish sharpshooters rained the messengers of death into their midst. Our cutter was sent out with orders to locate the Spaniard's ambush and destroy it. We eventually discovered it to be in a lighthouse. We steered for the lighthouse, keeping close to the shore as cutters do, when suddenly a masked battery on the shore opened fire on us. But we did not bother with this at the time. Our business was to put that lighthouse out of the business. The first shell we put into the lighthouse blew it all to pieces. Then we made ourselves busy with the masked battery which had been tormenting us. We treated it in about the same manner as the lighthouse. The work of the cutters is about the most hazardous of the whole lot. They must bear the brunt of the battle.

"I would like you to mention on behalf of my wife and myself that we are charmed with Chatham, and the lovely people we have met here. In all my travels—and I have done considerable travelling—I have never experienced such courtesy and kindness as we have received at the hands of your people. This Hotel Sanita is a magnificent place, and from what I can learn the bath have been the means of working truly remarkable cures. The people of Chatham have a God-send at their doors in those springs, and it is a pity that thousands do not take advantage of them. The Sanita should be more widely advertised, to let the world know what a beautiful spot you have got here. God has done everything for this place, and the people should try to help him out, by letting others know of it."
