There are a few common principles connected with the germination of WHITE, BLUE, RED, ORANGE AND GREEN. seeds, which are familiar to many, Made of Good American Cotton with great care Correctly numbered and Warranted but which are nevertheless worthy of being placed on record, and which may be interesting and instructive to those who have not given special atgreat leading requisites for germination are warmth, moisture, and air, but not light. Seeds deprived of these requisites will remain dormant. If the plants are very hardy, such as the chickweed, and the rye and the wheat plant, they will start at a few degrees above the freezing point. tention to the subject. The three degrees above the freezing point .-Others less hardy, as Indian corn and beans, must have a higher temperature Made of No. 10 Yarn, 4-Ply Twisted. and if the soil is too cold, they will rot instead of growing. Hot-house plants require a still greater heat, many of which will not germinate below eighty or ninety degrees of Fahrenheit. Moisture is very essential, as every farmer knows who has sown wheat and grass seed in time of a severe drought. Flower seeds sown in a dry garden bed, vegetate rapidly if the sowing is followed by a rapidly if the sowing is followed by a warm shower, which furnishes the New Brunswick COTTON MILLS, two elements for success, warmth and moisture. Many seeds are deprived of this essential requisite when they are allowed to become too dry they are allowed to become too dry by long exposure to the air. Seeds The Subscriber begs to intimate that he has removed into his New Premises, must have air, or they will not grow Buried deep in the soil, they remain THE "ARGYLE HOUSE," kept at a nearly uniform temperature (nearly opposite his old stand) and has completed his Importations for the season. There they have remained dormant till another ploughing has brought them to the surface, where they soon appear by myriads, to the surprise of the owner, who, if he is ignorant of the nature of the vegetable growth, ascribes their appearance to spontaneous vegetation. in Doeskins, Tweeds and Worsted Coatings, Large seeds, like those of peas, corn, &c., will find their way to the surface if buried several inches below ground, although they grow more freely at less depth. Small seeds must be much nearer the surface. The seeds of most of our worst annual weeds, Tobacco, Soap, Molasses, Meal, Pork. such as pig-weed, green amaranth, fox-tail, rag-weed and mustard, are quite small, and will not grow if buried in compact soil over an inch in depth. This is the reason that when the ground once becomes infested, it takes so long a time to eradicate them. The ploughing and the harrowing must be repeated many times, until every part of the soil, down as far as the plough reaches, is successively exposed to the action of the air. In this way crop after crop of weeds is destroyed, until the soil is purged of them. It is much easier and less expensive to prevent their growth, and never allow them to drop ripe seeds. Garden seeds often fail to germinate beand burying them three inches deep. m. They could not grow. A part remaining, were afterwards planted an inch deep, and they came up in profusion.
