THE LIVE HOG TRADE. (From the Canadian Farmer.)

"Quotations 50c. lower than a week ago," remarked a packer, "are due, not to lower prices in the United States, for they are not lower there. They are not to any extent due to lower prices for bacon on the old country market, for to any extent due to lower prices for bacon on the old country market, for we are sending little if any bacon out of the country at present when long clear is such a scarcity at home. But it is due to a large extent to the fact that farmers are marketing such a large percentage of unfinished, immature hogs, which are poor killers, and do not handle to good advantage in any way."

THE FARM

Whatever other reasons there may be way."
Whatever other reasons there may be, it is quite probable that packers anticipate a shortening of consumptive demand at the present high range of prices and are endeavoring to get into shape to meet it in time. The fall of the year, when the plentitude of vegetable foods of all kinds makes economy on the meat bill a possibility—the beginning, of the game season in England, always a slack time in the old country bacon trade, is historically associated with a drop in the price of live hogs, a drop which was always such an irksome one to the farmer, who has estimated his hogs at prices current all summer and fall, until the time when he was ready to cash them.

At the present juncture, the arrival of larger receipts of light unfinished hogs is probably accelerated by the

Without the lumber trade the horse market would be a very quiet one at the present time. City demand is quiet, although the present season should see arincreased demand for all classes of city horses, especially good delivery and heavy lorry horses. With the coming heavy lorry horses. With the coming of the autumn and winter season, with its heavier roads and increased local demands, activity should soon be in evidence. Buyers stick doggedly to a range of prices somewhat below the ideas of country owners, however, a fact which does more to curtail business than anything else. It looks as if holders must thing else. It looks as if holders mu-

British Climbers Fail in Attempt to Reach the Summit.

The interesting fact has just come out of the wilderness west of Edmonton that a distinguished party of British Alpine climbers have attempted to scale the icy sunmit of Mount Robson and have failed. Two points stand out distinctly in the story of this attempt and this failure. The first is that while they failed they felt more than repaid for the long journey just to have seen and to have stood in the presence of this "King of the Rockies." The party were twenty-lour days reaching the foot of the mountain from Edmonton. At John mountain from Edmonton. At John our days reaching the nountain from Edmonton. wift's homestead on the Upper Atha-oasca, August 24th, they met Rev. G. R R. Kinney, who had "Cook'd" them. Kinwarned them that they were too but they pushed on. On September th they began the ascent. When they ad gone within twelve hundred feet of nummit of this mighty monarch of hills, whose icy crown sits 13,700 he hills, whose icy crown sits cet above the sea, the famous the hills, whose icy crown sits 13,700 feet above the sea, the famous Swiss guide, Moritz Inderbinen, turned to the man following him and whispered hoarsely "Foehn," which is the name of the warm wind of Switzerland, which conpares with our "Chinook." And, lo, there blew down across the glacier the wind which softens the snow and makes the going bad. In the Alps the "Foehn" brings not only a thaw, but often an avaianche and sometimes showers of ice. Most of the climbers knew and, better still, they knew Moritz knew and they halted. Even as they talked the storm broke over the crags and the night fell before they could escape the the glacier over which they were travelling. It was with great difficulty that they made their way back to the timber belt. Speaking of the grandeur of Mount Robson, Mr. Hastings said it was a magniticent peak, the northerly face of which was a tremendous precipice.

Postal Problems.

The Victoria Daily Times reports that Mr. George Ross, of Toronto, chief superintendent of post offices in Canada, in company with a number of post office and railway officials, is making an investigation into mail problems in British Columbia.

Among the matters of importance to be considered is a request by the Board of Trade of Victoria that the Dominion Government aid in subsidizing a double daily mail service on the Esquimault and Nanaimo branch of the C. The attitude of the Government, so far, has been to refuse to grant a subsidy unless a guarantee is given that the 150 00 unless a guarantee is given that the service will be maintained all the year

VALJEAN.

Dr. Cleaver Gave His Great Lecture at Westminster.

Dr. Cleaver, pastor of the Metropoltan Methodist Church, Toronto, gave an exposition last night, in Westminster Presbyterian Church, of Jean Valican. the chief character in Victor Hugo's masterpiece, "Les Miserables."

Dr. Cleaver's fame as an exponent of the immortal character had preceded him, for before the entertainment started the whispered words were heard, "Standing room only."

The story of the early life of Jean Valjean was outlined, how he struggled to maintain the seven dependent on him, until one day, driven by force of circumstances, he stole a loaf from the baker's window in his native town. That cumstances, he stole a lost from the baker's window in his native town. That was the beginning of Jean's troubles. It was followed by 19 years in the galleys at Toulon. The initial sentence of five years was added to for repeated efforts to escape. Then, after regaining his freedom, with a desire to live honestly, the iniquitous oppression of the administrators of so-called justice extinguished the spark of right, which might and should have been the quicker fanned into a bright flame by them, but their severity, brought about by an innate selfishness, which is a manifestation of ignorance, drove all good motives from him.

Then the turning point in Jean's career came, when such practical Christiamity was, manifested by the Christ-like Bishop of D.—

It is too long a story to tell of the strenuous fight Jean had after the Bishop bought his soul for God. Dr. Cleaver did not lecture, he told the story of the brave man's life. Wherever a chuce presented itself to apply a personal lesson the speaker did not fail.

The audience were magnetized by the attractiveness thrown round the story. They learned of the nobility to do right, and the iniquity of wongdoing. The lessons to be learned were innumerable, and in his own inimitable way the reverend gentleman made them clear.

in his own immitable way the reverend One question the audience was asked to take away with them and ask themselves every day. It was: "Ien't it wrong not to do all the good you can?" It was the question of the old woman in the town of M. sur M., to Jean, when he was known as "Father Madeline." The question was asked by the old lady of Father Madeline, when he was offered the mayoralty of the town, and he heaitated about accepting it. Dr. Cleaver drove the question home and when those who were there last night hesitate about doing some Christ-like deed, the question will loom up in imaginary gigantic letters: "Isn't it wrong not to do all the good you can!"
