The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

My daughter has the circulating library habit, said a man to me the other day, and struck by the newness of the phrase, I cooked my ears and waited eagerly for more. "As soon as a book is out," my friend went on with a man's patronizingly tolerant smile for the folio of the week-end sex, "my daughter makes frantic appeals to the librarians to 'have a copy for her.' It doesn't matter in the least who the author is, or what the theme may be, but she must have a copy as soon as possible.

"The name of the author, I find, is often forgotten as soon as the first page has been read, and very often she has confessed to me that she reads the new books only because everyone is talking about them, and it's so nice to be able to say she's read them."

Isn't it fortunate for the circulating libraries that there are heaps and heaps of people just like this man's daughter?

I have a friend who is a reference librarian, and she says that every day many people come to her asking for reviews of the new novels, which reviews they read merely that they may be able to talk about the books as if they had read them.

In the same way I know people who seem to take pleasure in going to the theatre merely that when a play is mentioned they may say, "Yes, I've seen that."

Isn't this a bit childish?

Just think, in none of these cases are the individuals doing the things they do for their own enjoyment or edification, but merely because they want to be able to appear to others to have done them.

Don't we owe ourselves better motives for the use of our time than that?

And yet which of us is quite free from the faint of this motive?

YOU are?

Wait a bit, my friend.

Here's one more example.

Did you NEVER—not "hardly ever," but up and down NEVER—when you were traveling, go to some famous spot, some picture gallery, some historical landmark, not so much because you actively wanted to see it as because you wanted to be able to say you had seen it?—to be able to speak up when that place was mentioned and say, "Yes, I was there last summer."

And now do you still think you are qualified to plead a full "Not Guilty?"

Fads and Fashions.

Cotton voile and "aeronette" are used extensively for children's dresses. The trimming is usually Cluny or Irish point lace.

Stunning belts of white plique, with large oblong buckles to match, are suitable for the stiffly starched white linen shirtwaist.

Interest is a pendant in amethysts and pearls that takes apart to make three piers, a brooch, a double and single pendant.

Some of the most charming little skating caps are now being worn. They are of tapestry or brocade, and are edged with fur.

The sailor collar on children's coats is a decided feature of the midwinter styles. These can be of velvet or satin in black or colors.

Cure of Fish.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir—I am not surprised to note in the lengthy and interesting report of the Board of Trade in your issue recently that our cure of fish has shown no improvement. That it is a "matter of most serious concern" I agree; but the reason our cure of fish has not improved the members of the Board of Trade know full well, and as the Council is composed largely of business men who are directly interested in the fish trade, I would inform them, if they know it not, that the remedy is entirely in their own hands, so much so that if they would insist on properly cured fish from their dealers and agents, and refuse altogether or at a reduced price fish that is not so cured, I venture to say we should soon have a marked improvement in our cure.

I have known personally merchants who have insisted on their fish being properly split, salted, washed (and it is there most of the trouble lies) and dried, still when his dealer brings his fish which is not up to the required standard, he has either to take it as it is at the full market price, or allow his competitors to have it.

My contention is, that until the business men refuse to buy fish from other merchants' dealers there will be no marked improvement in the cure. We have many good fishermen who take great pains in the handling and cure of their fish, and we have I regret to say, many others who care little how their fish is handled, whether it is properly cured or not as long as they can get the full market price. This has been going on for years, until to-day it is almost forgotten that fish is an article of food, and from reports which reach me time and again, I should judge that the action of certain agents purchasing fish on our coasts has not helped to improve matters one iota. The captains of the schooners which take the fish to market could give many reasons why our fish is imperfectly cured by our fishermen; and how the apocryphal sales have not got some of the shippers thinking, when the percentage of badly cured fish is so great, I cannot understand; unless they are so used to the present state of things that they can easily overlook them.

The lobster fishery has only barely been rescued from an untimely end by legislation; and from my own experience I believe legislation and inspection about the only thing that will ever improve the cure of our codfish.

I shall be interested to see what our Board of Trade will have to say about "dun" fish, which also receives their attention, and trust their circular will so fully deal with the matter as to question that the "dun" fish will be a thing quite unknown in the near future.

In conclusion, I would add that believe the Board of Trade is filling a long felt want, and they have my best wishes. If his duties permit, I shall be glad to hear what the Secretary, Mr. Fearn, who I believe is a business man interested in the fish trade, has to say on the "cure of fish" and the question of "dun" fish, which we are more or less familiar with.

Respectfully,
WEST COAST BUSINESS MAN

Western Notes.
(Western Star.)
Three cars were being loaded with herring at the Curdleigh railway station yesterday, while at Humbermouth and Corvair Brook others were being loaded.

The American schooner Constellation is, yet frozen in the ice near Meadows Point. Should the drift be kept off the vessel may be got out within a few days.

The schr. Clintonia, of Davis Bros. Gloucester, is taking on board a quantity of fish at Lark Harbor, which has been purchased from the inhabitants of that place.

The Bay of Islands herring fishery the past season was prosecuted by 31 American vessels, 1 Newfoundland vessel and one vessel from Canada, chartered by a resident of this coast.

Hundreds of fishermen got frost-bitten last week while trying to save their fishing gear from being carried away by the ice, and now almost every man who meets shows marks upon his cheeks as the result of the storm.

Last Thursday, while the Gloucester schooner Montic was endeavoring to free herself from the grip of Jack Frost, an explosion occurred in connection with her gasoline engine which destroyed the exhaust pipe and put the engine out of service.

Wm. P. Blake, of Corner Brook, on Saturday gave us the names of some ten or twelve men, including himself, who had from two to three feet of nets each frozen in the ice at the lower part of the Humber Arm, and the prospects are that these nets "may never be recovered."

On Thursday while a large number of fishermen were on the ice at the outer part of Humber Arm engaged taking up their nets, a rent occurred and a large sheet of ice with quite a crowd of men on it began to drift out the Bay. When the men discovered their predicament there was considerable excitement for a while. Some of the men were taken off in boats, others got on board a vessel which was caught in the ice.

INSIDE HISTORY

Some Self-Explanatory Letters.
Battle Creek, Mich., Jan'y 7, '11.
Dr. E. H. Pratt,
Suite 1202, 100 State St.,
Chicago, Illinois.

My Dear Doctor:
"Owing to some disagreement with magazine several years ago they have become quite vituperative, and of late have publicly charged me with falsehoods in my statements that we have genuine testimonial letters. It has been our rule to refrain from publishing the names either of laymen or physicians who have written to us in a complimentary way, and we have declined to accede to the demand of attorneys that we turn these letters over to them.

"I am asking a few men whom I deem to be friends to permit me to reproduce some of their letters over their own signatures in order to refute the falsehoods.

"We have hundreds of letters from physicians, but I esteem the one that you wrote to me in 1906 among the very best particularly in view of the fact that it recognizes the work I have been trying to do partly through the little book, "The Road to Wellville."

"I do not sell or attempt to sell the higher thought which is more important than the kind of food, but I have taken considerable pains to extend to humanity such facts as may have come to me on this subject.

"In order that your mind may be refreshed I am herewith enclosing a copy of your good letter, also a copy of the little book, and if you will give me the privilege of printing this over your signature I will accompany the printing with an explanation as to why you permitted its use in publication in order to refute falsehoods, and under that method of treatment I feel so far as I know, there would be no breach of the code of ethics.

"I trust this winter weather is finding you well, contented and enjoying the fruits that are yours by right.

With all best wishes, I am,
Yours very truly,
C. W. POST.

Dr. Pratt, who is one of the most prominent and skillful surgeons in America, very kindly granted our request in the cause of truth and justice.
Chicago Aug. 31, 1906.
Mr. C. W. Post,
Battle Creek, Mich.
My dear Sir:—
"I write to express my personal appreciation of one of your business methods, that of accompanying each package of your Grape-Nuts production with that little booklet "The Road to Wellville." A more appropriate, clear headed and effective presentation of health-giving auto-suggestions could scarcely be penned.

"Grape-Nuts is a good food in itself, but the food contained in this little article is still better stuff. I commend the practice because I know that he greed and strenuousness, the consequent graft and other types of literary and malicious mischief generally can never be cured by legislative action.

"The only hope for the betterment of the race rests in individual soul culture.

"In taking a step in this direction, your process has been so original and unique that it must set a pace for other concerns until finally the whole country gets flavored with genuine, practical Christianity.

"I shall do all that lies in my power to aid in the appreciation of Grape-Nuts, not so much for the sake of the food itself as for the accompanying suggestions.

"Visiting Battle Creek the other day with a friend, Dr. Kelly of Evanston, Illinois, while I was consulting with Mr. Gregory, my friend visited your factories and came away greatly amazed, not only at the luxurious furnishings of the offices generally and the general equipment of the place, but with the sweet spirit of courtesy and kindness that seemed to fill the air with a spiritual ozone that was good to breathe.

"The principles expressed in the little booklet, "The Road to Wellville," I well know are practical and they work in business of all kinds, including sanitariums, as will be fairly evident before time is done.

"I know you will not regard this letter of appreciation as an flattering one. It is simply the salutation of a good fellowship to you from a man who, although he has never seen you, feels drawn to you by the kinship of thought.

"The only thing that makes a man live forever in the hearts of his countrymen and his race is the good that he does. Your position in this respect is an enviable one and I wish to extend my congratulations.

Yours respectfully,
E. H. PRATT

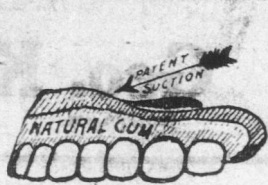

Woman's Power Over Man

Woman's most glorious endowment is the power to awaken and hold the pure and honest love of a worthy man. When she loses it and still loves on, no one in the wide world can know the heart agony she endures. The woman who suffers from weakness and derangement of her special womanly organism soon loses the power to sway the heart of a man. Her general health suffers and she loses her good looks, her attractiveness, her amiability and her power and prestige as a woman. Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N.Y., with the assistance of his staff of able physicians, has prescribed for and cured many thousands of women. He has devised a successful remedy for woman's ailments. It is known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is a positive specific for the weaknesses and disorders peculiar to women. It purifies, regulates, strengthens and heals. Medicine doctors sell it. No lowest dealer will advise you to accept a substitute in order to make a little larger profit.
