Important Resolutions.

Some ten days ago, the Prime Minister, Sir Edward Morris, gave notice of his intention to move the House into Committee of the Whole to consider certain resolutions, to stand first on the Order of the Day. The motion will come up to-day. The subject matters comprise:

- The cure and cull of fish.
- The standardization of fish when exported from this Colony.
- The protection and propagation of lobsters.
- The protection of the Seal-fishery.
- The effect of the prosecution of the whale fishery on our bait supply.
- The supply of bait.

Many of the matters have appeared in the Manifesto of both political parties. They have formed subjects earnestly discussed by the F.P.U. and appear in the platform of reforms desired by the fishermen. They have also been discussed by the Newfoundland Board of Trade and many recommendations have appeared about them.

Under these circumstances it should not be difficult to find common ground for a working understanding between all parties in relation to all these matters, which affect the staple industries of Newfoundland. By offering to withdraw the clause about the protection of hoods in his sealing bill, if the matter of protection of seals is taken up by the Government, Mr. Cosker has shown a disposition which is right and proper and set an example of a course of conduct which merits consideration in the discussion of the motion under reference.

CAPT. STAN DUDER left by the express last week for New York, where he joins a steamer of the Barber Line as Chief Officer. The ship takes a six months' Eastern trip.

The Late Rev. Dr. Frederick Woods.

(From "Zion's Herald," the New England Official Organ of the M. Episcopal Church.)

After an illness of several days, Rev. Frederick Woods, D.D., died Wednesday morning, Jan. 28, in his eighty-first year. Early in September of last year the "Herald" presented an excellent portrait of Dr. Woods, and a brief sketch of his life, in connection with the observance of his eightieth birthday anniversary, which occurred at his home in Melrose, Sept. 7.

He was a man of colossal proportions, as a Christian preacher, reformer, and friend. He came of splendid stock, and, under the nurture of the Holy Spirit, by painstaking, conscientious endeavor had made the most of himself.

He was born in St. John's, Nfld., the oldest of fourteen children. Graduating from Mount Allison University at Sackville, N.B., he went to Genesee College, New York, completing his course at Wesleyan as a Phi Beta Kappa man.

He was a great preacher in the best sense of the term. Many who knew him best say that in his days of vigor he was clearly the greatest preacher in the New England Conference. He was a comprehensive student. He knew how to study, and when he selected the theme for a sermon he covered the entire ground in preparation, and when the sermon had been delivered it was said by competent critics that he had treated every phase of the subject, and that nothing could be added. His sermons were a normal unfolding of the message which he had to declare, and steadily increased in intellectual power to the end. Since the announcement of his translation many ministers have told us of masterly sermons which they had heard him deliver, and how the main points of the discourse and telling utterances were impressed upon their memories. We hope that the family will seriously consider the wisdom of publishing a volume of his sermons.

Dr. Woods was a great reformer specially devoted to the cause of prohibition. Tremendous philippics were those which he thundered against the liquor traffic. For the churchman who bartered his vote for political preferment or influence he had only condemnation. Indeed, in some of his pastorates his utterances on this great question of temperance reform strained the friendship and loyalty of the churches he was serving. His political attitude is interestingly summarized by the "Evening News," of Malden, in the following paragraph:

"In politics he followed an independent course. He was with the Republican Party in the early days, and was appointed by Governor Andrews on the State Christian Sanitary Commission, the duties of which took him to Southern battlefields. En route he stopped at the White House and was welcomed by Lincoln, an incident in which he always took a great pride. Later he became affiliated with the Prohibition Party, but during the free silver agitation he was strong for McKinley, of whom he was a great admirer. Last fall he cast his vote for President Wilson."

He was a great friend. His confidence and friendship were easily won, and when once given were not withdrawn except for gravest reasons. He was big enough to allow his brother minister the same privilege of possessing independent opinions that he claimed for himself. The writer bears grateful and affectionate testimony to his expressions of fraternal interest, and to the kind and tender expressions of sympathy and support which he was always offering so sincerely to his many friends.

We have but one Frederick Woods. Though entered upon his life in heaven, he has left sacred and inspiring memories and impressions which will live on to bless us here for many years to come.

The funeral, which was largely attended, occurred at the Church on Friday afternoon, Jan. 30, with the pastor in charge. Bishop Hamilton delivered a very fitting tribute, and Rev. Dr. Charles F. Rice offered prayer.

George St. A.B.C.

Yesterday afternoon the members of the George Street A.B.C. were entertained, before the usual lesson study, with an interesting paper by Mr. C. Loughlin, entitled, "Lessons from the life of Canada's Grand old Man—Strathcona."

The topic for the lesson was "Christ's hatred of Shams" (Luke II, 37-54). During the discussion two interesting papers bearing on the subject were read by Messrs. Kelloway and Barrett. During the afternoon Mr. Watson contributed a recitation which was greatly appreciated.
