House-Cleaning as a Dissipation.

By RUTH CAMERON.

There are many women with whom house-cleaning is a form of dissipation. They love it, they glory in it. They indulge in it almost as a man does in drink.

Dissipation means waste. It means indulgence in anything to such an extent as to waste one's energy and make oneself inefficient in the business of life.

One can indulge in drinking, smoking, eating, bridge playing, house-cleaning, to such an extent that any of them become a dissipation.

We hear a great deal nowadays about the women who neglect their vocation of house-making to play bridge, or go to suffrage meetings. I believe there are just as many who neglect their business of home-making for excessive indulgence in house-cleaning. No, the two things are not the same, nor anywhere near the same. House-cleaning is a normal and necessary part of home-making, but when it is allowed to assume abnormal proportions it is no more right or natural or desirable than a swelling on some part of the body. We should keep clean to live comfortably. We should not live merely to keep clean.

I know a woman who frankly admits that she loves house-cleaning. As the spring months draw near she says she "just aches" to get at her house because it is so dirty. Of course, it never is what an ordinary person would call dirty. The first beautiful spring day, Nature's bugle call to human kind to come out of doors and make holiday, is her signal for the beginning of her spree. It is no exaggeration to call it that. She cleans that house from top to bottom. She goes in under the eaves, drags each article out, dusts it and puts it back again to lie untouched and uncleaned "till another year be gone." She takes out every single drawer in the house, washes it and puts it out-doors to air. She takes out each piece of stored away clothing, airs it and puts it away again. She comes out of her spree (which lasts intermittently for two months) a wreck, physically and nervously. And the most absurd part of the whole thing is that she insists she is doing this for her husband and children, who, needless to say, hate and dread the performance. As a matter of fact, she wears herself out in this way partly because she thinks it is her duty, but much more because she loves it. In other words, it is a form of dissipation with her.

I know another woman who loves cleanliness and order just as much as this one and yet she only does the absolutely necessary house-cleaning. Why? Because she realizes that her duty to her husband and children demands that she shall conserve her energy, her time and herself, and not spend extravagantly a any one direction. "The greatest sacrifice I ever made for my children," she once said, "was to give up having things immaculate as I did before they came."

Now, which of these two women, think you, has the higher deal of a woman's vocation?

The American Bison.

By GEORGE FITCH.

Author of "At Good Old Sivas."

The American Bison is a great and noble animal whose history is closed. He was elbowed into oblivion by the American settler and the American hunter about forty years ago.

When the first Americans began to venture timidly into the howling interior of Nebraska, they had to push aside vast quantities of buffalo which is the informal name for "bison" before they could proceed. The buffalo was a large ox with an automobile robe for a skin. He had an imposing head with a long chin beard, a huge and shaggy hump and a body which sloped down rapidly and dwindled off into an insignificant and foolish tail, hardly large enough to break the leg of a stout horse fly.

The buffalo roamed the plains of herds of countless thousands, ate grass for a living and was as harmless as a Woodman parade. He had two great misfortunes. He was good to eat and he was easy to shoot. After the Union Pacific railroad was begun, hunting buffalo became a western pastime and the man who couldn't get enough buffalo for a mess in a single morning was considered to be a very poor shot indeed.

Nature had spent many centuries developing and perfecting the buffalo, but man with his bumptious contempt for Nature usually managed to exterminate a specimen in about ten minutes after he had sighted him. Men shot buffalo as they do clay pigeons to-day and left them to rot on the plains, coats and all. When we consider how many automobiles are freezing each winter nowadays for the want of a fine buffalo robe to throw over the hood we cannot but feel shocked at the criminal wastefulness of the hunters of the seventies.

The buffalo endured being hunted in his proud but patient manner for a few years and then startled the nation by disappearing. An investigation developed the fact that there weren't any of him left to speak of. A few hundred buffalo now eke out an existence under protection in the west but they are dejected and pen-sive and seem to take a positive pleasure in dying.

The disappearance of the buffalo was tragic in its suddenness, but we should not get too indignant over it. If we had ten millions of buffalo to-day we would not know where to put them. There is no room in Nebraska and Kansas would pass a law against them because they would spoil the wheat crop. So long as there are enough of them left to supply our circus and decorate the landscape of our national parks, we should not re-pine. The buffalo had to move on because he was blocking traffic.

A brimless Jap turban is trimmed with a huge pompon of cabbage roses in front.

Where Responsibility Lies.

No matter how large, or how small, a business may be, nobody can deny that its Office is the nerve centre of the firm. Every transaction, important or trivial, must be recorded at the Office. An order is received at the Office, its history is recorded at the Office, and finally payment is received at the Office. If the Office makes an error the firm stands the loss. That's why you must be sure that your office is modern and dependably equipped for the care of all important papers. To do this effectively you need the up-to-date equipment of the "GLOBE-WERNICKE CO." When sixty offices in St. John's have found this necessity this equipment can surely be of use to you. Caught Passing Money of $273,000 Bank Robbery.

Man Arrested in Toronto With $3,500 of the Cash Stolen in New Westminster in 1911.

Toronto, June 12.—More than $3,000 of the $273,000 taken from the vault of the Bank of Montreal at New Westminster (B.C.), was recovered in Toronto Saturday afternoon. Harry J. Matthews, of New York, in whose possession the money was found, is being held by the police on the charge of receiving stolen money.

Matthews passed a $5 bill at the hotel and five minutes later was placed under arrest. A search of his suit case revealed $3,500 in Bank of Montreal bills. One figure of the serial number of each bill had been so skillfully changed that it was only by the use of a powerful magnifying glass that the transformation could be detected.

Matthews said he came from New York, though papers found in his possession showed he had been recently in Toledo.

The New Westminster bank robbery in the spring of 1911 was the most famous robbery of its kind in Canada. Three men entered the bank one night, blew open the safe, and stole $273,000 in gold, of which $40,000 was recovered.

Charles MacNamara, alias "Big Australian Mac," New York, was sentenced to nine years in the penitentiary for stealing the automobile in which the robbers made their escape. Charles Dean, Los Angeles, was tried and acquitted. The third member of the gang, Martin Powell, who was caught in Detroit, will stand trial at the fall assizes at New Westminster in September.

More Fires.

Fires provoke immediate sympathy for the sufferers and also thankfulness for persons who escape. Another thought should be whether one is personally and adequately protected. An insurance policy with Percie Johnson would provide for you this desired security and at small expense. Have you enough insurance?

Household Notes

A leg of mutton should be roasted from two to three hours.

Listerine is an excellent disinfectant to use for the mouth and throat.

Nutmegs will grate more satisfactorily if started from the bottom end.

Steak one inch thick should be broiled from four to six minutes. Lamb or mutton chops, broil six to eight minutes.

When buying mutton see that the fat is firm, clear and white; mutton with flabby, flivd or yellow fat has been in cold storage too long. Pickles and vinegar should be kept in glass jars or bottles. When kept in glazed ware the vinegar acts on the glaze and forms a poison.

If you live in the country and throw soapuds and dishwater out, don't forget that rose bushes and other pet plants will thrive on it.

If you are so unfortunate as to have different size sheets in your linen closet, mark all the sheets of a size with one distinguishing mark.

To remove coffee stains from light material, brush the spot with glycerine, then rinse in luke warm water and press on the wrong side. Olives, stoned and chopped, and mixed with fresh butter or heavy cream and cream cheese make one of the most delicious of sandwich fillings.

French kid gloves can be cleaned by putting them on the hands, then washing them in some spirits of turpentine, then hang them in the air to dry.

To take fruit stains out of linen, stretch the stained spot over a bowl and pour boiling water through it. Peaches aims are an exception to this rule.

If lamp chimneys are only a little clouded and you wish to save time, simply steam them inside over the tea kettle and wipe with a clean cheese-cloth.

Salmon or Salmon trout sandwiches are delicious. Flake the fish and add a little cream to it. A dash of French mustard is an improvement.

The net gimples so much worn nowadays will last much longer if they are washed without ironing. Shape them carefully while damp instead.

Add a little salt to the bluing water in which white clothes are rinsed if you want to be sure to keep the bluing from setting in spots or stripes.

Cold mashed potatoes from yesterday's dinner make very nice croquettes by the adding of one egg. Shape them, roll them in crumbs and fry in fat.

A good way to clean feathers—Put them into a paper bag with a cupful of Indian meal, half a cupful of flour and three teaspoonfuls of borax, then shake.

Very excellent orange extract is made by putting grated orange peel into a bottle half full of pure alcohol. Allow it to stand for three weeks, then strain.
