Father Vercker.

"The lesser griefs that may be said, That breathe a thousand tender vows Are but as servants in a house Where lies the master newly dead."

For open converse is there none So much the vital spirits sink, To see the vacant chair and think, "How good! How kind! and he is gone."

The words of the poet may truly apply to the late lamented Father Vercker, "How good! How kind! and he is gone." For not only in his own Parish will the Pastor be missed, but the whole Southern Shore mourns the loss of the dear old priest. Scarcely a person in the district but have met and received a kindly word from Father Vercker. To him they went to pour their tale of sorrow into his willing ear and came away consoled and comforted.

"He watched and wept, he prayed and felt for all." And Father Vercker was indeed the friend of the children, never was he so happy as when surrounded by God's little ones; he told them merry stories and listened to their innocent laughter.

Those who had the privilege and pleasure of meeting the Pastor of Ferryland in his own home will ever remember his whole hearted genial hospitality, how quickly and pleasantly the hours sped whilst the good priest told stories of the early days on the mission, as only Father Vercker could tell them.

We are lonely, yet we cannot grieve that God found this a fitting time to call his faithful servant home. Father Vercker is dead, but his memory will live for many years. "Oh! though oft depressed and lonely All my fears are laid aside, If I but remember only Such as these have lived and died." E.
