Fads and Fashions.

Large armholes are a feature of the Autumn top coats. The new small hats seems to be wound around the head.

Black is much used to relieve brilliant color contrasts.

Summer frocks show dainty vests of tucked organdie.

Dresses for street wear still have exceedingly plain waists.

Bold striped effects and fullness at the hips are favored in some French dresses of silk.

Points of Dishonour.

SIR PERCY SCOTT'S FOURTEEN THIRTS.

Admiral Sir Percy Scott, reviewing the peace terms, says:—The whole civilized world is I think, in agreement that the peace terms are fair and equitable; in reviewing them I have no doubt that the whole civilized world will agree on the following points:—

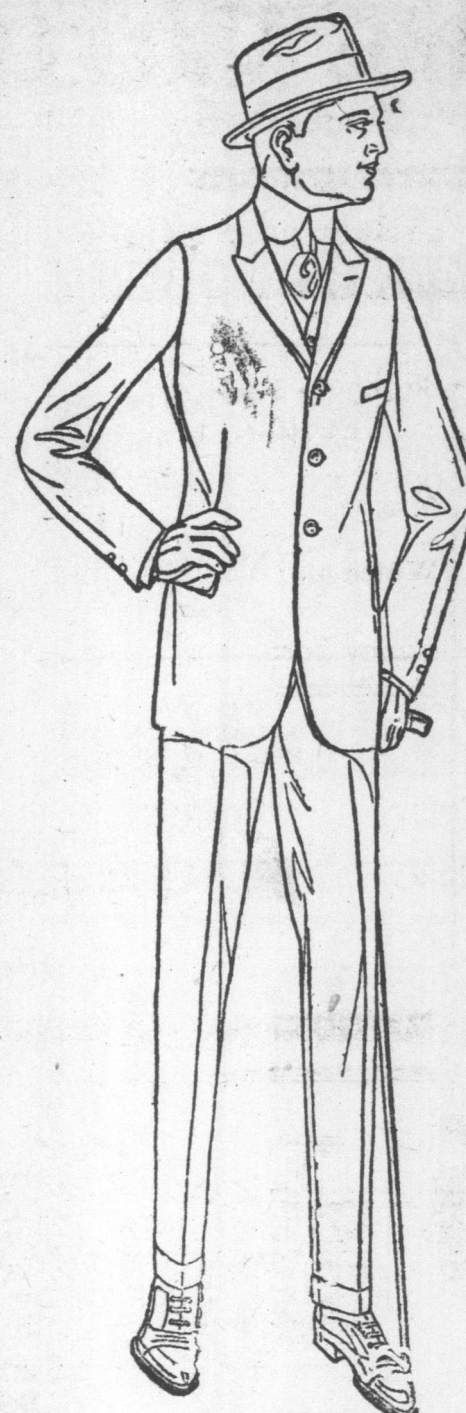

1. That the Germans deliberately brought about the war.
  2. That all the statements made by the Kaiser and his high officials to the effect that the war was forced upon them were lies.
  3. That in the future neither the words nor the signatures of Germans can be trusted.
  4. That as regards the German national character, the war showed that when victorious against Belgium they conducted war on ruthless, remorseless, and relentless principles, and committed every crime that savagery can compass.
  5. That they were encouraged in these crimes by their officers and high officials.
  6. That as liars, from the Kaiser downward, they are unparalleled; they lied to their own nation, they lied to their allies, they lied to the world.
  7. As thieves and wanton destroyers of property they have outdone the savage race of Huns that they are descended from; their wholesale thieving was not the acts of individuals; it was organized and controlled by high officials.
  8. That in defeat their true character is revealed; it is despicable, for they are now squealing like whipped curs.
  9. That the statement made by Hun officials to the effect that they could have carried the war to a victorious end, but that internal trouble forced them to ask for an armistice, is a lie.
  10. That in the war the Huns were fairly and thoroughly beaten on the sea, under the sea, on the land, and in the air.
  11. That the war has practically been a triumph of civilization over barbarism.
  12. That probably the most contemptible character of the war was the man known as Kaiser William II.; he sanctioned the crimes committed by his barbaric subjects; he lied to his Army and to his people; his speeches were mostly blasphemous.
  13. The Kaiser prolonged the war and the consequent shedding of blood for three years, for he knew that he was beaten at the Marne.
  14. When in November, 1918, the end had to come, the Kaiser, instead of facing it like an Emperor and a man, ran away.
- Their last act in sinking the ships at Scapa Flow teaches the world that the Huns have no honor, and that the world has been foolish in treating them as a civilized race; they are barbarians.

Vile Woman Spy.

Said to Have Worn Uniform to See Men Shot.

One of the most terrible monsters revealed by the war is Alice Aubert, one of the "twenty-five informers of Laon" now being tried in Paris by court-martial for treason during the German occupation. She is a woman of extraordinarily hard appearance, but with the remains of a sort of savage beauty. Her lover, a young man named Reselle, is in the dock with her. "You have the deaths of at least five Frenchmen on your conscience," the president of the court told her. She denounced several French soldiers who were in hiding in the Laon district. The Huns shot them, and Alice Aubert is alleged to have borrowed a German soldier's uniform to attend the execution. After this the Mayor of Angoulême and his deputy and several other people were shot. One of Alice Aubert's victims was Mme. Daubenton, who was sentenced to ten years' imprisonment for giving the French soldiers a piece of bread. Alice Aubert twice visited Paris on spying missions. On the first occasion she spent a fortnight in the capital to collect information for the enemy. In a whispering voice she told the court that Lieut. von Heeringen, with whom she had an intrigue, compelled her to carry out these missions by horsewhipping her. The most monstrous crime alleged against her is denunciation of the Mayor of Assis-sur-Serre, named Bauge. Even the Hun military judges were revolted by her infamy. According to her story Reselle, her lover, said to her one day, "Bauge must die. Tassot and I have sworn it." Tassot was Bauge's unsuccessful opponent at the municipal elections. In revenge a charge against Bauge of harboring French spies dropped by aeroplanes was trumped up, and Tassot swore that he had seen them at the Mayor's house. Bauge was sentenced to death, but his wife succeeded in proving his innocence and saving him, and the Germans shot Tassot instead for bearing false witness. Reselle, a low-browed brute, vehemently denied his mistress's version of the story.

Why Bread Gets Stale.

The Warmer It's Kept the Longer It Will Keep New.

The Government Committee which has been sitting recently on the evil of night baking have spent a large part of their time listening to evidence on how and stale bread. Dr. Robertson, one of the witnesses, stated that bread was at its best from twelve to twenty-four hours old, and it was suggested that the best way to keep bread was in an earthenware pan. It took scientists quite a long time to find out why bread went stale, and it was thought for many years that it was because the moisture had dried out of it, till it was noticed that even a damp loaf went stale as quickly as a dry one.

The real thing which makes bread go stale is cold. Loaves become staler much more quickly in winter than they do in summer, and new bread keeps new much longer if kept in a pantry which is kept warm. As most pantries are especially chosen because of their coldness it's no wonder the bread goes stale so quickly. Putting them in big earthenware pans keeps them warm, and, therefore, newer for a long time.

Try keeping your loaves in a warm place, if you like fresh bread.

The Shoe On the Other Foot.

(From the Boston Transcript.)
The English clergyman was in the middle of his sermon when a baby began to cry and its mother rose and carried it towards the door. "Stop," said the preacher, "the baby's not disturbing me."
The woman turned towards the pulpit and replied: "Oh, 'e ain't, an' 'e? But you're a-disturbing of 'im."
