

held vesterday at St. Thomas's, the old garrison church, at 11 a.m.. All ranks showed a strength of about 326. The Old Comrades under Pr Chafe mustered nearly a hundred strong at the roll. In the abse Lt Col. Goodridge who was pr uniform at Gower St. Met Church, accompanied by Capt Herbert Outerbridge, as Military cretary representing the brigade at unveiling of that Congregation's War Memorial Tablet, Major Williams was 2nd in command, with Major Talt. M. C., Adjutant, were in charge of the choral, and all ranks were more than usually grateful for the beautiful service of worship. Rev. C. A. Moulton read the prayers, Rev. Dr. Bolt. M. A., the lessons, whilst the sermon was preached by the Rector Rev. E. C. chap., 26th verse. "Why are ye fear-ful, Oh ye of little faith."—Christianfty and Industry were his topics. The subject was one for deep thought great industrial unrest of the day, world-wide in extent, from Soviet Russia to the Western slopes of America. The world is so bound together in trade and commerce that when disasters occur in one part its results often reach the far corner of the earth. Humanity as it were is sailne on the world's ocean in one boat. Humanity does not exist for Industry, but Industry exists for Humanity-that is the theme to consider. The preacher referred to a late book written by Mr. MacKenzie King, the Canadian Prime Minister, on this subject and the author bases his arguments in (1) mediation, (2) arbitration, (8) public opinion as aids in settlements of all labour troubles. Many labor uni are taking the Cross out of their thoughts to-day and submitting the Red Flag in the old world to their detriment, for the principles of the Cross can never be replaced, as it has stood the test of time, wars and revolutions and will do so to the end. The world's problem to-day is really caused by fear and mistrust. With confider restored all round improvements will result. The preacher especially welcomed the members of the C. L. B. to the old garrison church and assured them of his hearty support always, as his parish stood for the same high principle as the Brigades. He asked them all when they came to the Cross Roads in every day life to choose the best road always. He told the lads it was easy to swim with the tire and always harder against the stream. He wanted the lads of the brigade to unite always in growing strong into strong taking the cause of right every time working in order that our citizens, our city and our Dominion would be helped out of all its great troubles and difficulties and be polished into one of the brightest jewels in the great Empire to which we are proud to belong.

The collection was taken un by ten of the officer's mess and after the National Anthem, the companies filed out and marched direct to the Armoury where Col. Goodridge was waiting their return. After officially presenting a silver cup to the winning tug of war team at Feild College, the Colonel dismissed the Battalion till Tuesday, when all ranks, including the Old Comrades are invited to hear an address, from Major Gardner, formerly of the C. E. Forces, on the subject of Economics—particularly re-lating to Finance. Thrift—a most timely subject.—Q.

Strangest Word.

It was one of those social affairs that you point to with pride and view with alarm, and at 10 o'clock things were dragging dreadfully when a bright young man saved the situation by asking: "What is the strangest word in our language?"

The other guests looked blank until he explained: "It is a word of one vowels. While there are five letters in the word, there are only three different letters. And the freaklishest

Riots in the Fens.

The Isle of Ely in 1816 had become somewhat like Prospero's life, where there was "everything advantageous to life," save the means to live. It was under such circumstances that on May 22, a great body of insurgent farmers assembled at Littleport, a small town on the River Lank, and commenced their proceedings by a night attack on the house of a magistrate. Then they broke into shops, emptied the cellars of the public houses, and finally marched to Ely, was the means to live. It was sembling a town sacked by a besieging army, the principal inhabitants having been compelled to abandon their houses in terror for their lives, leaving the property to the prey of this fearful band of desperate men. There could, of necessity, be but one termination; the military were called in, and a sort of skirmish took place, in which blood flowed on both sides; and finally marched to Ely, where they continued their lawless continued, and the parish of Littleport was described as reconvicted and sentenced to death on charges of birgiary and robbery—then a capital offence—of this number of their houses in terror for their lives.

SCHOOMERS OUTWARD.—A large number of sermination; the military were called in, and a sort of skirmish took place, in which blood flowed on both sides; and finally, a large number of the rioters were lodged in Ely gaol; then example of the parish of Littleport was described as reconvicted and their occurrence to death on charges of birgiary and robbery—then a capital offence—of this number of their houses in terror for their lives.
