

Excellent Balanced Programme at the Nickel

Essential Singing and Splendid Feature Film.

Last night's programme at the Nickel Theatre was excellently balanced, the musical portion of the evening being of particular interest. Drury and Harrison easily maintained their high reputation by their masterful renditions of a group of songs and duets that could not have given more satisfaction if the influence had the choicest. It is an attraction that is really worth hearing, as also is the music by Professor J. McCarthy at the Piano and Jack Thomas at the bells and effects.

The management of this theatre has been very fortunate in securing Marshall Nelson's masterful motion picture achievement, "A Stranger's Journey" which will be screened on Monday. The story is a thrilling dramatic romance amid the busy life of a great shipbuilding concern. The founder, Shane Keogh, whose fortune he has accumulated through the yards to his two children, John and Derith. There are many "strangers" who wish to share at this golden banquet and the story is of their partial success and final frustration. The romance in the building of mighty ships has been caught in this film and made the background for a very human, emotion-arousing drama of American life. It has an angle of appeal to every lover of pictures and is not as only a master artist as Marshall Nelson can depict it. Beauty, imagination and reality are mingled into a rousing and compelling drama which no one can ever forget.
