CHAPTER XXIV. WITHIN DOORS.

"What discovery can he make?" returned Garrett. "The mine shaft may give up the body, but cannot give up our secret. Dead men tell no tales. I wish that were all we have to dread."

"Not decidedly," answered Nathan. "I always tried to bring him to utter that opinion, but he wouldn't. He always spoke of what he called a contingency, and we can never feel secure so long as that man breathes."

"Still, what then? I am safe. 'Twas you who concocted the imposition. I was your victim as much as any one."

"Oh ho! Then you would desert me?" said Garrett, daily. "You think to slip your head out of the noose, and leave me to dangle for us both. Not so fast, Captain Gibson. If I am snared, I swear you shall not escape. We stand or fall together. So, I'd advise you not to turn traitor under the idea that you will be safe."

"Why what could you do?" exclaimed his confederate, almost mockingly. "I would swear that I was the victim of your conspiracy, and you would have no proof to show the contrary."

"You think so," returned Garrett, with a sneer. "Well, probably you would find yourself mistaken. But have you forgot that there is as much in last night's work as will do us both, were it revealed?"

"Ay, were it revealed; but have you not just said that nothing can be proved against us?"

"Not if we both hold our tongue. But think ye I would keep silent then? No, Captain Gibson, I would have my revenge by sending you to the sea-bed."

"Wretch, fiend!" shouted Stephen, livid with rage and fear; "you are the author of all my misfortune. But for your first devilish machination I had not been drawn into this peril. You tempted me; you—you—"

And in the whirlwind of his ungovernable passion he flew at Garrett's throat, and twisting his hand in his handkerchief, made a desperate effort to strangle him, his eyes meanwhile glaring with murderous fire.

FROM PENNSYLVANIA.—LANCASTER, Pa., July 31, 1871. Mr. James I. Fellows—Sir: I am pleased to inform you that my health is improving under the use of your Hypophosphites. Excessive tax of the brain had so exhausted my body that I could neither work nor enjoy myself, and it was with difficulty that I could sleep at all. I tried rest, active exercise, various medicinal remedies, and the most popular physicians, and accidentally heard of your syrup in New York. I purchased three bottles at Caswell & Hazard's, and until I used that nothing relieved me. Now I can eat well, sleep well, work well and feel well, and have good reason to consider your syrup a most surprising and capital restorer of the mind and nervous system, and advise all who have much brain work to take it. You are at liberty to use this as you may. Yours very truly, JEROME SHENK, Insurance Agent.

Thousands have been changed by the use of Peruvian Syrup (a protoxide of Iron) from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women, and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial. For Dyspepsia and Debility it is a specific.
