New Perisian Evening Gowns

Evening dresses are not easy to design so Paris models are always welcome. Because of their beauty of line, color and combination of material. In gowns of this year there are especially lovely draperies and they are used in so many and fanciful ways that each one seems more attractive than the other and designed especially to suit the wearer by the correct placement of the folds.

Many types of evening dresses—some for the more formal social occasions, can stand a lot of trimming and several materials. But these of course, are always kept in the same carefully graded tints or tones, out of the daring creations of one of the master designers, who wish to find out how striking a color combination women will wear. And for the last few seasons combinations have been worn by people who have never dared to think of a riot of colors before. But these effects will always be in vogue rather than the rule for a simple reason that they are not as becoming as the more delicate tints by evening light, and if one ever wishes to look beautiful an evening dress presents the best opportunity for so doing.

Wearing the hair so flat and close to the head seems to go nicely with the new lines of draperies and long, straight effects, though often a large arrangement of beaded bands with drooping ornaments or crepey plumes are added when the effect is too simple. Even ostrich feathers are used to trim an arrangement of gauze that looks like a turban or cap.

A tendency toward the old-fashioned square cut, low necked gown is noticeable in many models; indeed, this is seen as an outline of a yoke even on afternoon dresses, to which it adds a quaint touch. Most of the evening dresses are made over a foundation generally of marquisette or satin. In the more diaphanous robes, in chiffon, silk, muslin and even net. This does not mean that the waist portion is boned necessarily, but a sort of giraffe belt is often added that has a few supports so that the dress will stay on the figure without getting twisted about.

Notes from the Alpine Camp

At the annual meeting of the A. C. C. yesterday, the following officers were elected:

Hon. President—S. D. Sanford, Fleming, Ottawa.
President—Prof. A. P. Coleman, Toronto.
Vice-president, east—Dr. F. C. Bell, Winnipeg.
Vice-president, west—J. P. Forde, Revelstoke.
Honorary secretary—Mrs. P. Burns, Calgary.
Honorary treasurer—E. M. Saunders, Calgary.

Director—O. O. Wheeler, Sidney.
Secretary and Librarian—S. H. Mitchell, Sidney.
Advisers—Capt. D. Patterson, Woodstock; Central, C. W. Rowley, West, W. W. Foster, Victoria.
The director read a communication from Sir Sanford Fleming, congratulating the club on the splendid work it is doing, and sending greetings to the members assembled in camp.

A second communication from Sir Sanford Fleming, congratulating the club on the splendid work it is doing, and sending greetings to the members assembled in camp.

The director reported that the club had, through the influence of the Hon. J. Rogers, obtained $1,000 grant from the Dominion government in recognition of the work done.

That the British Columbia government gave a grant of the same amount as an acknowledgment of the value of the organization in where the information about, and arousing interest in the great mountains traveling their province.

Also a grant of $800 from the province of Alberta.

Hon. W. W. Foster, deputy minister of public works for British Columbia, addressed the meeting, telling of the progress made by and the immense undeveloped wealth of his province.

Professor Freeborn from New York, delegate from the Appalachian club, an elder sister society, gave a brief sketch of the organization he represented. Professor Freeborn is the only member in camp this year who has been present at every summer camp since the club was first organized in 1906.

The president extended a hearty welcome to the American associates present, and expressed his appreciation of the value they were to the organization.

Votes of Thanks.

Votes of thanks were given to the president for his able address.

To Mrs. Henshaw, who had just returned from England, where she had been much to extend interest in the club.

To the devoted and hard-working secretary.

To the Swiss guides.

To the experienced climbers for the unselfish aid given the uninitiated.

To the good-natured and efficient cooks.

To the Calgary boys in attendance for their courtesy and readiness to oblige.

Loyalty to the clubbers, loyalty to the mountains, loyalty to humanity, the president said, seemed to be the motto of those in charge of the camp.

The meeting then adjourned until the summer camp of 1913.

How Rockies are Formed.

Prof. Coleman, F.R.S., at the annual meeting of the Alpine club of Canada, told how the Rockies mountains were built up.

The president said his address would follow along the line of his own hobby. The practical matters he would leave to the able director, the father and founder of, and great force behind the club.

Most people love the mountains. They are full of variety, of interest, of grandeur. To us they look as though they had always been there; but they, too, were built up. The poet spoke of the everlasting hills, but the scientists discovered that they were ephemeral things, lasting a thousand years or more, always building upward, they begin to decline. About this decline there is something tragic. Even the mighty mountains pass away from Wanderers to this camp. They followed along the windings of the motor road which led to a public road and thence to the camp.

Many times they swam the river on their journey through the beautiful scenery which led to the camp. They followed along the windings of the motor road which led to a public road and thence to the camp.

Good Housekeeping

By Jane Eddington.

There is a difference between taking care of a by-product or leftover when you have it and planning both to have and care for it. Thrifty housewives plan their leftovers to be used in a way which will yield a secondary as well as a primary service. In buying beef or mutton for boiling, veal for stew, another service, give a good meal, a potting and meat loaves, with every variation of these; in buying steaks and chickens, she plans to have and use the carcasses for a secondary product, usually a liquid one.

A soup stock from such sources may be just as good and sometimes as rich as if the meat cooked had been prepared with nothing but the soup in mind. Such meat, however, is put to cook in boiling water instead of cold, and if the stock is strong it is because it is made from considerable meat, rather than because all the juice and flavor have been cooked out of a regulation soup amount.

The economical housewife makes inexpensive additions, almost countless, to these palatable stocks, adding expense or but little expense, as she sees fit. It is astonishingly easy to add expense, but once accustomed herself to limitations she may come to value small things as she values a postage stamp, far beyond its money value, because it will do so much.

The most universal addition on the lowest cost basis, is rice. A little rice goes a long way. Sometimes a soup is the product of more than one leftover, some of the rice and some liquid from a boiled meat, or such as one prepared from lamb bones left from pot-roasted lamb and the tomato juice from the vegetable dish, with some slight vegetable additions or vegetable leftovers.

Leftovers must be used as early as possible. Third day relics are rarely suitable, unless kept in a most perfectly sanitary way. If any one of a number of things in a leftover soup is too old, it will give a soup a bitter taste and the food value may be consequently less than nothing.

If we can use what would naturally be a leftover for the meal as we use the dish from which it is a by-product, the better planners we are and the more thrifty we are likely to become in our planning.

From a collection of actual ways of means of this sort as carried out in different homes and not from some theoretical plans for a family, I choose the following:

Purée of Carrots and Veal Muffins.—A 10 cent veal shank. Cook until tender, using sufficient water so that there will be about a quart of stock when finished. Peel one and a half pounds of carrots and cut in half pints of this stock for the soup. To each add one large carrot and half an onion which has been boiled until tender and put through a colander. Heat to the boiling point, add one tablespoonful of flour, mixed to a smooth paste, with one cup of milk and one teaspoon of butter.

Veal Muffins.—Remove veal from shank and chop fine. Boil two large potatoes and mash. Mix veal and potatoes until light, season with salt and pepper and one teaspoon of onion juice. Add one egg, well beaten, and

TRAPPERS IN FROM NORTH; FUR CATCH GOOD

Edmonton, Aug. 8.—With last winter's catch of fur from the Chipewyan country, Colin Fraser has arrived in the city accompanied by fifteen realdents of the Northland who see civilization only once each year. The fur catch of 1912 is an improvement over last year's, and amounts to between $30,000 and $35,000. It includes many valuable skins of black and silver foxes, wolves, wolverines, mink, martens and ermine. Every kind of wild beast is included.
