'That all sounds very fine, my pretty philanthropist; but it will be time to believe in your sincerity when I see the results of your efforts," the proud-spirited girl bitterly retorted.

Agnes bent her head in troubled thought for a moment; she longed to do comething to tame this "heart of fire"—to win her for a better life and spirit.

At last she asked, in a friendly tone:

"Are you working here, Laura?"

"Yes; six days a week, and sometimes beven, for as many dollars. Rather a come-down, isn't it, when I used to give more than that for a single pair of ore than that for a single pair or oots," she asked, with a harsh, miser-

Meantime, I want you to try to win Uncle Archibald to be your friend, and in that also I will help you. You have a haughty, antagonistic spirit; conquer it. Show him that you can be gentle and womanly, and I promise that you will find him kind and considerate. Let me be your friend, too; there have been some hard, rough places in my own life, and I know how to sympathize with the troubles of others. Only a little while ago I had to toil for osympathize with the troubles of others.
Only a little while ago I had to toil for mere pittance, to feed my feeble mother and myself; and now that God has opened his bountiful hand and given abundance. I am going to try to me an abundance, I am going to try to lighten the burdens of others. There, I must go," she added, as Laura caught her breath convulsively. "I will send you a check in a day or two. Good-bye," and with a friendly little nod Agnes glided from the room and closed the door softly between herself and her vanquishwhere she had stood for a full minute after she had gone; then, really humbled the first time in her life, she threw self into chair and wept truly repentant tears, which served to wash much of the bitterness from her soul.

CHAPTER XLV.

The future home of Max and Agnes was at last ready for occupancy, every portion of it having been put in the daintiest order and elegantly furnished through-

In a description it would be impossible o do justice to the taste, beauty and egance which prevailed in every room. Mrs. Remington, out of the exceeding mrs. Remington, out of the exceeding gratitude of her heart for the restoration of her daughter, and for the great happiness she experienced in the union of the two whom she loved best in the world, had spared nothing. She had determined that nothing should be left undone to make their start in married life as perfect as possible.

It was thought best, upon talking the matter over, that they should move into the new house and get settled before the redding as such an arrangement would onvenient and comfortable for ent home before he went away, and thus free his mother from all care or respon-sibility in the matter. The suite of rooms that had been appropriated for the use of the young couple was in the front of the mansion, and directly overlooked the lawn, which was now like a carpet of emerald velvet. These rooms, three in number, besides the bath, were perfect gems. The spa-cious private parlor, or boudoir, with its double glass door opening upon a bal-cony that was just over the grand encony that was just over the grand entrance porch, commanded a magnificent view on three sides, and was a delightful apartment. The carpet was of white ground, its pattern clusters of forgetme-nots and golden rod, mingled with fine running vines and variegated moss. The furniture, of a light and graceful pattern, was upholstered in some silken fabric to match the carpet. Quaint and beautiful tables stood here and there. An etagere, of exquisite design, and ornamented with rare and costly articles of virtu, was a treasure in itself. Lovely vases of silver and porcelain and cut glass were arranged upon tables and mantel. Pictures, not too many nor too large, but each a gem, adorned the white and gold walls. Silken curtains of light blue, overhung with others of delicate large. blue, overhung with others of delicate lace, were looped back from the large plate-glass windows with heavy cords, terminating in ponderous tassels of the

The chamber beyond was furnished in the same delicate tints, as was also the dressing-room, which was a little bower dressing-room, which was a little bower of luxury, even to the dainty toilet articles, which were elaborately ornamented and marked with a monogram composed of the letters "A. W. R." "They are too pretty to live in," Agnes had remarked the first time that she was allowed to peep into the rooms after they were all in order, and Mrs. Remington felt more than repaid for all her thought and care as she saw the look of delight on her expressive face. delight on her expressive face. Mrs. Remington's rooms, also comprising a suite of three, were in the left, or south, wing, while those set apart for Mr. Trowbridge were in the north wing. There were other suites for guests, while the servants' rooms were in the story above.

This blunder was not discovered until a couple of days afterward, when Mrs. Remington, who was superintending the putting away of her costly china and the hanging of pictures, suddenly stopped, in the midst of her work, and exclaimed, in a tope of dismay.

"Do. I would not have anything happen to it for the world." said Mrs. Remington, anxiously. "It is an heirloom that you must never part with." Greatly annoyed that he should have been so negligent. Max hastened to the auction rooms, thinking he should surely find the cradle there, for he imagined that no one would care to purchase such an ancient, clumsy article, in these days of pretty brass cribs and swinging beds.

The bad defeat of the London lacrosse team by the Tecumsehs at Toronto Saturday, again makes apparent the folly of pitting a team lacking practice against a team in the best of training. At the same time, in the opinion of every man who has the real interests of the team at heart, Saturday's Waterloo was the best thing that could possibly have happened. Experience is a dear teacher, in sports as in everything else, but it is none the less a valuable one. The Toronto papers will sneer and laugh in derision at "London's imported players," but we will not mind. We will take to heart the lesson that a fast team on paper is not necessarily a fast team in the field, and give thanks to grim old Experience, who taught us. It may as well be admitted frankly that London was hopelessly outclassed in Saturday's game, but it doesn't follow that we haven't the material to win. As a matter of fact, the Tecumsehs' periority does not lie in the individual skill of their players, but in their admirable system of passing and in their excellent all-round team work. It was admitted by Toronto experts who witnessed Saturday's contest that Paddy Kelly, O'Brien, Bretz, Tommy Lawlor, Laura sat staring blankly at the spot and others of the London team, are as brilliant players as any who board in Toronto. What the team lacks is practice, and this must be supplied at once. Brilliant individual plays will not win lacrosse games. Paste that in your hat, Mr. London, and get down to work. There must, of course, be some weeding out, and some strengthening, and the work will be commenced at once. It is said that the management of the Londons have a line out for two of the best men on the Toronto team which has just returned from an English tour.

Saturday's game, while not rough in few of the Londons escaped some sort the champion will make. Attell is of injury. Little was left in the Em- wonderfully clever, and by most judges ergency Hospital at Toronto with a broken nose; O'Brien suffered a severe cut on the back of the head; and Lawler received two nasty cuts over the eye. All the other London payers were more or less bruised. Tierney, Varkon and Dowse were all given a rest for their pugilistic proclivities.

'Way out on the slope of the Pacific Coast, between the shadow of the Rockies and the glint of the Golden Gate, old Pete Lohman, once the most talked-of-man in London the lesser, is doing wonderful stunts on the green diamond. You can't forget Pete, and you wouldn't wish to if you could. To be sure his residence in London was a brief one, but somehow you think of him still as an Old Boy, just as you think of the other fellows who come home to the Forest City every year or so from outlandish corners of the continent. Pete gave London a winning baseball team, and it is doubtful whether any other player ever endeared himself so much to the fans in this corner of the woods. One can still pleture him, grim, grizzled and strenuous, calling out cheerily from behind his catcher's mask: "Now then, everybody on their toes! Work hard, men! Yes, Pete is still "Cockney Pete."

"Everybody on their toes": that is the secret of Pete Lohman's success. He is the possessor of two qualities not often, alas, found together-a talent for organization and hard work, good combination plays. and a conscience. These qualities have made Pete the king-pin of the California diamond. You'll find Rube Waddell's name oftener in the papers, perhaps, but it's runs that count, and locals in one minute, when Pennock runs are what Pete is after. When he took charge of the Oakland team, he the way, when, on a pretty combinadetermined to win the pennant; and tion between Soules, Durkin and Greaif he doesn't succeed it will not be for trix, on a pass from Kelly, Pennock lack of effort. Writing of the team a correspondent of the Sporting News says: "They are playing the most consistent ball of any club in the league and deserve much praise for their magnificent work thus far. Their fielding and base running has never been equaled on a California diamond, while their batting is on a par with the other three teams."

By the way, Kid Mohler, another old Cockney, whom Pete Lohman induced to jump from cold, inhospitable Denver to the land where oranges are plentiful as cabbages with us, is playing the Roach went off to even up. "Max, what was done with your game of his life, and is reckoned the fastest second baseman. The Denver fans raised Teams: a howl of despair when Mohler packed is bag; now, however, they claim to have landed a second baseman, who, while not such a spectacular player as Mohler, covers the second bag quite as satisfactorily.

One of the most remarkable games in baseball annals was played between Mohler's team and the Sacramento aggregation the other day. For nineteen er; third home, Dowse; second home, long innings Oakland and Sacramento Donald called the game on account of darkness, the score board showed these results: Oakiand 4, Sacramento struggled and when Umpire Jim Mc-4. The contest was the more remarkable because the opposing teams were the leaders and the tailenders of the league. During the game, the former made but six hits off young Thomas.

Lack of Team Play Was the the entire nineteen innings. Apart from this extraordinary contest, the Sacramento team has done pour work, and one disgusted follower writes pathetically: "The club is now away for a series of 23 games, 12 with Oakland, 6 with San Francisco and 5 with Los Angeles, and may the Lord have mercy on their souls. We fear the worst."

> Tecumseh Park fans will remember Grim, the ex-International League player. Last year Grim managed the Portland team of the Pacific Coast League, and to such purpose that the Harry Struthers pitched half the game, team landed the pennant. His services and Sam Lee, the veteran, was also in for some reason not to be accounted for were not appreciated, and at the opening of the present season Spokane secured him as manager. The other day he had the exquisite satisfaction of defeating his former team four games out of a series of five. 'Dutchy" Kostal, the good little pitcher who was on London's staff when Pete Lohman's team was at the height of its glory, and McKevitt, formerly of Hamilton, are both also doing good work for Spokane. The latter is batting at a .379 clip and fielding .917. Walter L. McCallum, writing from Spokane, says: "Kostal is now in form and pitching great ball. He has pitched four games, won two and lost two. The last game he pitched against Portland he made them look like 30 cents.

Champion Titus' defeat by Scholes in the Harlem regatta of Memorial Day gives his Henley chances a dubious appearance, writes Joe S. Jackson in the Detroit Free Press. Both of his very best now, but that very best does not apparently approach the form of young Ten Eyck, the New England lad whose sensational work in the old country will ever remain a bright page in the history of American row-ing progress. Scholes' chances, on Friday's showing, appear to be much the better. The Canadian finished with a good lead, and he was strong and fresh when he went over the line. Titus was all in. Speed alone does not win the Henley event. It is not a race sprinters. Condition and stamina are necessary. The English oarsmen are older men, better developed than our athletes, and can stand the grueling of a Henley week better than Titus seems able to.

The feature boxing bout of this week will be that between Abe Attell and Young Corbett, at Denver, on Friday. They are to do 126 pounds at 3 o'clock, a weight that is pounds above Attell's appearance, was really a bruiser, and real scale, but that is the lowest that who have seen him work is expected to out-box Corbett without difficulty. In a finish or distance fight he would hardly have a chance with the champion, as Yanger showed at St. Louis This go will be for ten rounds, and by mere cleverness. He will have a LACROSSE. TECUMSEHS WON.

Toronto, June 2 .- The Tecumseh laby 18 goals to 1 in a poor exhibition of lacrosse. The bright feature of the game was the fine combination and effective shooting of the Tecumseh home, the London defense being unable to withstand the onset. Durkin, Kelly, Pennock, Angus, Grimes and Dobbin did good work, while, for London, Mooney in goal was the star, while O'Brien and Sorvey worked some Rose c. f. Pirie, s. s. At the face-off London secured the ball, but Kelly stole it, and after a pretty run passed it to Pennock, to Greatrix, the latter scoring by a neat shot. The second goal went to the again scored. On resuming play London did a little better, although their home was very weak. Mooney and Durkin were ruled off for rough play. The Tecum-

THE CITY LEAGUE. "Al" Watts, the Aberdeens' clever pitcher, deserves a very large share of credit for winning the game between the Aberdeens and Rockets, played at Tecumseh Park on Saturday. He pitched the game of his life, letting the Rockets have only three hits. The Rockets, who, previous to this game, had not been beaten, were not in good shape, and played rather shabby ball. Five errors by the Rockets and eight hits by the Aberdeens tells the story. The game was interesting, however, Waud pitching fairly well, although the loss of Phillips and several other members of the team was felt sorely. The game had more attraction to the 200 spectators than the one played between London and Struthers, which at its best was slow. The Struthers aggregation were beaten from the first. the box. LAJOIE FOR MONTREAL. Montreal, June 2.-Manager Dooley made a runaway game of it with the of the Montreal baseball club, befor leaving for Buffalo Friday night, mad known the fact that he has made offer to Napoleon Lajole. Of course, Lajole is much too expensive a man for Montreal to carry for any length of time, but, from June 9 to July 2, the team could assume the burden with profit, for he would be a great drawing card among the French-Canadians. Manager Dooley figures out that, if Lajoie could get a good round sum for playing ball three weeks in Montreal, outside the jurisdiction of the Pennsylvania courts, he might be willing to play out the remainder of the season with the Philadelphia National League team on the terms of-fered him by Col. Rogers. Montreal, of course, would not play Lajole anywhere except in Canada. The club has a solid series of games, beginning June 9, on the home grounds and lasting three weeks, and that is about

The closing match of the Western District Rifle Association took place at the government ranges on Saturday. Whether or not the association will now be dissolved remains to be seen. Local Turf Notes

The Barn, by Springfield, Robert Hueston's 3-year-old colt, on Saturday proved himself a worthy brother of Wellington J., who has been winning many races at Toronto and in Quebec.
With Jockey Fred Sturgeon, a 140pound boy, up, the colt worked a half mile beside Bobs, the property of Mr. J. Flaherty, in 51 seconds, under several reliable stop-watches. He is as green as grass, as this was his first work out; but if his running qualities increase in proportion as he is ed, his owner says he will be well. satisfied.

FOOTBALL.

BRANTFORD WON FINAL Hamilton, June 2.-In the final match in the Western Football Association series Saturday afternoon, Hamilton was defeated by Brantford by a score of 2 to 1. It was 1-0 in the first half in favor of the Telephones. There was a good deal of fault found with the referee, T. Atkins, of Galt, for allowing rough playing on the part of the winners.
