Organized No. 16 A. S. C.

Lieut.-Col. Coles is one of the officers of the 7th Regiment Fusil Leaving the infantry he organized and commanded No. 16 A. S. C. with the ank of major. When war was de-lared he offered his services and that of the most active recruiting agencies in the district, and in the first year of the war sent overseas sufficient men to fill three full A. S. C. companies.

For some time Lieut.-Col. Coles was purchasing horses and supplies in Western Ontario, and then left for Valcartier with a detachment of his old comtier with a detachment of his old comtier with a detachment of his old command. Camp Borden, Ont. Dear Sir,—I feel constrained to say a word of praise regarding the conduct of your battalion, while they have been on our trains for week-end leave or otherwise. I think I can safely say without danger of that the 161st Battalion has conducted itself at all times in such a man-ner that it could not be considered otherwise than highly creditable. They have respect for their offiers, for their battalion, and for hemselves, and this has taught others to respect them. I am sure that such conduct will bring its own

It is a great pleasure to announce millinery of such smart distinction. In this special group are hats of marked refinement and elegance, that are more than reasonable in

At this time, the opening of the millinery tall seasons, Mrs. Westermann's reflections of what the New York shops are showing in approved millinery fashions will be most interesting to our customers.

Stirror

The outstanding style in millinery is quite naturally French. The Napoleonic Hat is decidedly in vogue, and it is indeed very becoming to most women. Panne velvet is a favorite material, the greys combined with white, and all black lead in favor

There are far too many beautiful shapes to settle down to hard and fast rules as to the kind of hat one shall wear, and we women are more than ever deciding in favor of what is becoming as being correct. Velvets are most shown, and usually in the darker colors, touched with a bit of brilliant color in cord, ornaments, or ribbons. Kurzman favors brown velvets with dull gold ornaments. Tan effects in draped toques, rather tailored, are good, while the larger sailor shapes are worn more for the dressy effects. Fur trimmings are just as much a necessity to the stylish woman as they were last season. In spite of their commonness, long veils continue their popularity. Taking a birdseye view of the shops, it would seem that height is a tendency of the new millinery. Ostrich is shown on some of the latest importations. Beret Hats and Draped

Hats are considered smart. Altogether one will have a wide variety from which to select, and there will be no cause to complain of not finding a becoming hat.
