Declares Citizens Would Have To Be Educated in Use of Extinguishers.

saier in its day, but "The Trail of 98" one of the oldest street car nags operated by certain communities in Canada by which individual citizens are urged to purhcase at least one extinguisher for their homes and offices.

"When a fire breaks out all thought of the extinguishers is usually abandoned and the fire department in the end, always has the work of extinguishing the blaze," the chief said. "Of course extinguishers are all right if people knew how to operate them, but it would require a long process of education to teach them. Besides, if atcion were taken on the matter, the city would be flooded with fire extinguisher salesmen pestering the life out of everybody."

Chief Aitken referred to an incident in the town of Millbank where smart American salesmen, demonstrating the efficacy of their extinguishers, built a fire on the main street and proceeded to put it out with their contrivances. The matter that the street car nags operated by Harry Humeston, which might be written today by passengers on the Springbank line would surpasse even the best efforts of the afore-mentioned Mr. Service.

"Service" was certainly absent from the Springbank line thoughts about the street railway.

"Old 98" is a blood relation of "Old 27," the "Mummah" of all street cars on the North American continent. Something happened to "27" last night. She carried such a boisterous gang of young people up from Springbank on her last trip Friday that she developed a case of nervous as well. Thus it was that "98" was pressed into service this morning.

Miss 98 started to pick up passengers 30 years ago, and she has been at it ever since.
