make him think any thing of his was worth thowing; and none of the following works were ever compoled with a view to the prefs. To amule himfelf with the little creations of his own fancy, amid the toil and fatigues of a laborious life; to transcribe the various feelings, the loves, the griefs, the hopes, the fears, in his own breaft; to find fome kind of counterpoife to the ftruggles of a world, always an alien scene, a tafk uncouth to the poetical mind; these were his motives for courting the Muses, and in these he found Poetry to be it's own reward.

Now that he appears in the public character of an Author, he does it with fear and trembling. So dear is fame to the rhyming tribe, that even he, an obscure, nameless Bard, fhrinks aghast, at the thought of being branded as 'An impertinent blockhead, obtruding his nonfense on the world; and because he can make a shift to jingle a few doggerel, Scotch rhymes together, looks upon himself as a Poet of no small consequence forsooth.'

It is an obfervation of that celebrated Poet, * whofe divine Elegies do honor to our language,
