'Then why did you ask her tonight? It would have been better had your father spoken first to Mr. Cohen. "I did not ask Miriam tonight. She spared me all she could. She was in the store as I passed, and I went in. This is what she said to me: 'Bram, dear Bram. I fear that you begin to love me, because I think of you very often. And my grandfather has just told me that I am promised to Judah Belasco, of London. In the summer he will come here and I shall marry I wish, mother, you could have seen her leaning against the black 'kas,' for between it and her black beautiful and pitiful as an angel's.'

'What said you then?" "Oh, I scarce know. But I told her how dearly I loved her, and I asked her to be my wife.

"And she said what to thee?" "'My father I must obey. Though he told me to slay myself, I must obey him. By the God of Israel I have promised it often."

'Was that all, Bram?" "I asked her again and again. said: 'Only in this one thing, Miriam, and all our lives after it we will give to him.' But she answered: 'Obedience is better than sacrifice, Bram That is what our law teaches. Though I could give my father the wealth and the power of King Solomon, it would worth less than obedience. And. for all my pleading, at the last it was 'I cannot do wrong; for many right deeds will not undo one wrong one.' So she gave me her hands and I kissed them-my first and last kiss-and I bade her farewell, for my hope is over. I know that." She is a good girl. I wish that you had won her, Bram." And Lysbet put I'm very much obliged to her; you down her work and went to her son's his head against her breast.

"As one whom his mother comfort-Oh tender and wonderful consolation! It is the mother that turns the bitter waters of life into wine. Bram talked his sorrow over to his mother's love and pity and sympathy; bella's service, grandmother.' and when she parted with him. long "Thou hast a brave soul, myn zoon! myn Bram! and this trouble is not all for thy loss and grief. A sweet mem-ory will this beautiful Miriam be as long as thou lives; and to have loved well a good woman will make thee always a better man for it."

The trusting, generous letter which Joris had written to his son-in-law arrived a few days before Hyde's departure for London. With every decent show of pleasure and gratitude he said: "It is an unexpected piece of good fortune, Katherine, and the interest of £5,000 will keep Hyde Manor up in fine style. As for the principal, we will leave it at Secor's until it can be invested in land. What say you?" Katherine was quite satisfied: for under her own hand, she was at heart very far from being either selfish or mercenary. In fact, the silver cup was at that hour of more real interest to her. It would be a part of her old home in her new home. It was conected with her life memories, and it made a portion of her future hopes and dreams. There was also something more tangible about it than £5,000 in her name at Secor's Bank.

But Hyde knew well the importance him to face his relations and friends on a very much better footing than he had anticipated. He was quite aware, too, that the simple fact was all that society needed. He expected to hear in a few days that the £5,000 had become £50,000; for he knew that humor, when on the boast, would magnify any kind of gossip, favorable or unfavorable. So he was no longer averse to meeting his former companions— even to them, a rich wife would excuse matrimony; and, besides, Hyde was one of those men who regard money in the bank as a kind of good conscience; he really felt morally £5,000 the better. Full of hope and happiness, he would have gone at a pace to suit his mood; but English roads at that date were left very much to nature and to weather; and the Norfolk clay in springtime was so seep and heavy that it was not until the third day after leaving that he was able to report for duty.

His first social call was paid to his maternal grandmother, the Dowager Lady Capel. She was not a nice old woman; in fact, she was a very spitefull, ill-hearted, ill-tempered old wo-man, and Hyde had always had a cer-tain fear of her. When he landed in London with his wife, Lady Capel had fortunately been at Bath, and he had then escaped the duty of presenting Katherine to her. But she was now at her mansion in Berkeley Square, and her claims upon his attention could not be postponed. And as she had neither yes nor ears in the evening for anything but 100 or whist, Hyde knew that a conciliatory visit would have to be made in the early part of the day.

He found her in the most careless deshabille, wigless and unpainted, and rolled up comfortably in an old wadded morning gown, that had seen years of such service. But she had outlived her vanity. Hyde had chosen the very hour in which she had nothing whatever to amuse her, and he was a very welcome interruption. And, upon the whole, she liked her grandson. She had paid his gambling debts twice, she had taken the greatest interest in his various duels, and sided passionately with him in one abortive love

"Dick is no milksop." she would say, approvingly, when told of any of his escapades—"Faith! he has my spirit exactly! I have a great deal more temper than anyone would believe me capable of"-which was not the truth, for there were few people who really knew her ladyship, who ever felt in-clined to doubt her capabilities in

So she heard the rattle of Hyde's sword, and the clatter of his feet on the polished stairs, with a good deal of satisfaction. "I have him here, and I shall do my best to keep him here,' she thought. "Why should a proper young fellow, like Dick, bury himself alive in the fens for a Dutchwoman? In short, she has had enough, and too much of him. His grandmother has a prior claim, I hope—and then Arabella Suffolk will help me-I foresee mischief and amusement. Well, Dick, you rascal; so you have had to leave America! I expected it. Oh, sir! Hyde laughed merrily. "Why,grandmother, such advice from you! I don't trust it. There never was a more perfect hater than yourself." "I know, Dick. I used to say: 'Lord, this person is so bad, and that person is so bad, I hate them.' But at last I found out that every one was bad, so I hate nobody. One cannot take a sword and run the whole town through. I have seen some very religious people lately, and you'll find me very serious, and much improved. Come and go as you please, Dick. Arabella and you can be perfectly happy, I daresay, without minding them, I hope?" "I still take my share. Old fools will hobble after young ones. I ride a little and visit a little, and have small societies quite to my taste And I have my four kings and aces that is saying everything. I want and pray tell me what they say of me behind my back. I like to know how much I annoy people. "I shall not listen to anything unflattering, I assure you."

"La, Dick! You can't fight a rout of women and men about your grandmother. I don't want you to fight, not even if they talk about Arabella and you. It is none of their business; and as for Sir Thomas Suffolk, he hears nothing outside the House, and he thinks every Whig in England is watching him-a pompous old fool!"
"Oh, indeed! I had an idea that he was a very merry fellow."

Dun & Co.'s Report of the State of Trade in Canada. Toronto, Oct. 9.—Messrs. R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly statement of trade in Canada says:

The result of extended inquiry among drygoods, woolen and clothing houses in Montreal as to how the 4th of October paper ran off, would treat to show that the proportion paid was a fair average. A few houses professed disappointment with results, but the general run state that payments were up to their expectations, and in some cases that improvement, though not marked, was noticeable in remittances, while several houses re-ported from 60 to 65 per cent of cus-tomers' paper provided for. Liberal shipments of butter to Britain are reported for last week, with prices fairly maintained, and cheese shows some gain in local values, while cable quotations for late makes are advanced. The money market is without change, call money being readily available at 4 1-2 per cent.

There is a fair volume of trade in wholesale departments at Toronto, The colder weather is favorable for heavy goods, and prospects generally ar considered satisfactory. Prices of cot-ton goods are firm at the late advances, and woolens are steady. The higher prices of wheat and flour are well held, although they check business to some extent. The better prices for many descriptions of farm produce will improve the conditions of farmers. and ultimately have a beneficial effect on trade. The export trade in apples has been unusually heavy, and prices uncommonly low. Cheese, however, continues to show slight advances, and cured meats are somewhat firmer. The local financial situation shows little

Fish Story Telegraphed From

Havana, Oct. 8.-An incident far beyond the ordinary run of events oc-curred in the bay here. A man in a sailboat was making his way across the water, which, incidentally, is full of sharks. The man noticed an unusally large shark swimming after the boat; but as this was nothing unusual he paid little attention to it. Suddenly, however, when the boat was moving very slowly, an enormous shark, probably the one which had been following the boat, jumped half out of the water and floundered inside the boat.

The boatman, in alarm, hastily clambered up the mast and yelled for assistance, which was soon forthcoming. The boat, with the monster shark in it, was towed ashore, where the shark was killed.

MUSICAL INFORMATION:

A Good Piano Is a Liberal Education,

What is there that so opens the mind to good and gentle inspiration as music? What is there so inspiring or ensobling in its influence?

The music, however, must be good music. And good music cannot be produced from a bad piano. The influence of the most charming voice or the most perfect violin, however well handled, is destroyed if accompanied by a bad piano.

MASON & RISCH PIANOS ARE THE INSTRUMENTS OF THE CULTURED.

They are found in the homes of our most refined and wealthiest citizens, where the plano is viewed not as a mere article of furniture, but as the interpreter of our deepest feelings. The prices of Mason & Risch Pianos are not unreasonable, quality considered; in fact.

they are much lower than most people suppose, but they give satisfaction from the first, and they last. Our terms of payment are most liberal, and we give straight cash quotations, with logues and list of purchasers free on application.
