CITY ASKED TO PAY FOR HORSE

Horse Owned by Messrs. Fleming, Formerly Badly Injured This Morning by Falling Through Meter Box. A horse owned by Messrs. Fleming, of the Phoenix Foundry, was quite badly injured this morning by breaking through the covering over a water meter, on the sidewalk in front of their premises on Pond street and the city has been called upon to pay the damage. The meter in question regulates the supply of water used in the foundry is placed beneath the sidewalk at the entrance to a passage way into the works. The covering is of wood. This morning as a double team was being driven out of the foundry one of the horses broke through the covering and his hind legs went down. It took a number of men nearly half an hour to extricate the animal and it was found to be quite badly gut up. Messrs. Fleming have sent a letter to the corporation several days ago and their legal adviser, calling upon the city to repair the sidewalk and to pay for the damage done to the horse. Director Murdoch of the water and sewerage department claims that some years ago the city passed a law that all meter boxes should be kept in repair by the parties served by them and he contends the city is not liable. Meanwhile there is a dangerous hole in the sidewalk that should be attended to at once to prevent further accidents.

FIRST AID TO EDITORS

(Punch.) The silly season being with us, and promising to be unusually productive of the epigrammatic, Mr. Punch offers the directors of the great London dailies a choice of further succulent topics for their readers to munch upon. Should children be told all? Is honesty the best policy? Does one ever really know the time? What is life? Are we dead when we die? Shall we let India go? Are holidays dangerous? Is marriage a success? Should sauce for the goose be sauce for the gander? Is there really anything of importance? Are things what they seem? Ought we to bathe in water? Is food deleterious? Can one learn by experience? Should newspapers cease? With regard to the harbor race to be held on September 14th, the whistling buoy mentioned in the course is 34 miles outside the bell buoy, and is known as the Mispec buoy, or the old original whistling buoy, as there is an automatic gas and whistling buoy 1 1/3 miles off Partridge Island, which has nothing to do with the course.
