tivity of various agencies, governmental and private, he looked forward to a fairly large flow of British immigrants to the Dominion this year. "The guestion is," he said, "can we in Canada fully justify ourselves and maintain that interest? I have great doubts unless as a people we take more personal interest in the immigrant and give him or her a practical velcome to our shores. Government paternalism, if that there be, is not enough. In Britain a man or woman in necessity can turn to the dole, as their system of out-of-work insurance is unfortunately called. In Canada no such agency exists and we are therefore under certain disability in making the Dominion attractive to the would-be settler.

"It is obvious we need to make an after care system as perfect and as generous as possible.
