Wounded Reaching London
Tell Amazing Stories of Slaughter

Huge Masses Decimated—
Huns, Drugged or Drunk, Danced Grotesquely in Front of Guns

Wounded men arriving in London tell amazing stories of the fighting. The men in the front trenches west of Le Catet on March 21 knew the date and time of the enemy's attack which was launched exactly at the expected minute. Into one semi-circular trench, wherein there were 100 machine guns, the enemy in dense masses swarmed right and left all Thursday and Thursday night, falling in hundreds and enfiladed by machine guns. Over piles of dead and wounded men and horses, the enemy kept pushing up, filling the gaps. Our men fought on without food or water, orders having gone out not to touch the rations owing to risks of poisoning from the gas attack. Down on Friday disclosed the enemy dead thick on all the surrounding ridges.

The narrator says: "Two things drove us from the trench—the enemy's numberless men and our own exhaustion from want of food. We had nothing to eat since Wednesday night. I got nothing until I reached Peronne on Saturday except a little of my rations, which I ventured to consume at risk of being poisoned. It was between 10 and 11 o'clock on Friday morning when two advancing columns threatened to take us on the flank of either side, that we began to leave the trench. As we left we continued to enfilade them by our fire and reduced their numbers, while our own ranks were getting thinner and thinner. We retired to St. Elmo, fighting all the way, sometimes hand to hand. We then decided to make for Saulcourt and organize there our company along with a few Leicesters from our left. We were reduced this time to between thirty and forty, so our captain divided us into four groups, he taking charge of one, two sergeant-majors and a sergeant taking over the other groups. Each group took a different route and as we retired we continued to take toll of the advancing column closely in pursuit, while every few minutes we could hear our names blowing up, tearing holes in their formations. Our party in charge of a sergeant-major reached Saulcourt, but I did not hear what happened to three other parties, for I was knocked out by a bullet in the arm at Villers Faucon. "At Saulcourt another division took over the rear guard action from us, and we passed through their ranks to the rear, the walking wounded making for the casualty clearing station. At Peronne, three miles back, we saw our heavy artillery coming into play. Our division had ten divisions throw it. The battalion on the extreme right was badly cut up, the last we saw of them they were engaged in hand to hand fighting with two or three battalions of German infantry and cavalry. The division which took over the fighting from us repulsed four cavalry attacks."

A sergeant in a regiment attached to the 24th Division, which held part of the front between Peronne and St. Quentin, considered the enemy, in spite of his great numbers, could not have broken through on this sector, but for the gas attack. "I talked with six wounded of six divisions, and they all agree it was impossible to hold the front lines under the weight of the enemy's number and the gas shells, and all agree that in the German storming waves there was a big majority of young men. The enemy used for the first time a certain amount of dye in the gas shells. This dye stained the craters caused by shell explosions, Drugged or Drunk.

"An artillery sergeant told me his battery fired with open sights into the masses of Germans advancing, at short range, and literally cut lanes in their ranks. The battery continued fire until the enemy came to 200 yards, and then they got the guns away. I was told that some Germans actually danced in front of our machine gun fire as though they had been drugged, and others who walked as if drunk. No living creature could have faced such a terrific fire if he had not been either drugged or drunk. Our machine gunners fired until they were sick of killing."
The latest wounded arriving included South Africans, some of the others having been gassed. They describe the terrific fight of Delville Wood, where the South Africans held three enemy divisions for twenty-four hours. They say the gas mist was so thick that the advancing masses in close formation could not be seen until within twenty yards. The gas was called "blue cross," a new kind and odorless. The enemy also used smoke barrages.
One of these officers said at Reuillon Farm the enemy massed 1,500 guns, but our field and machine guns caught them and scarcely a man survived.

WOULD NOT BE WITHOUT BABY'S OWN TABLETS

Mrs. A. C. Smith, Goodwood, Ont., writes:—"I have used Baby's Own Tablets for the past two years and have found them the best medicine a mother can give her little ones and I would not be without them." The Tablets never fail to banish the simple ailments of childhood. They regulate the bowels; sweeten the stomach and make the cross sickly baby bright, healthy and happy. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

and as the gas hangs around the craters for a few hours, the dye stain was intended apparently to act as a warning to the Germans to keep clear of them as they advanced.

FINE ADDRESS TO CANADIAN CLUB

John A. Stewart of New York on War After the War

Fierce Commercial Combat—Says German Mind Could Not Comprehend Motives of Peace Centenary—English Speaking Peoples Must Stand Together

A declaration that the German idea of world domination will not end with this war, and the principals that Germany will bring into trade and commerce after the war, formed the substance of one of the most eloquent and convincing addresses that has been presented to the Canadian Club this year. At luncheon in Bond's last night, the club entertained John A. Stewart, of New York, to dinner, after which he addressed them on the subject of "The War After the War." After being introduced by the chairman, J. H. Frink, he said in part: "I shall tell you some of my experiences with Germany and the things that Germany did leading up to the present. I have always felt that there is fundamentally no difference between the people of Canada and those of the United States. It has been the object nearest my heart to clasp the hands of my Canadian friend with that of my American friend. In 1908 I invited a number of gentlemen to meet me at luncheon in New York to consider plans for celebrating the 100 years of peace. The object was successful. Shortly after I received a communication from Germany stating that they would take steps to counteract the influence of the committee in favor of Britain. Out of the evil of his own mind, the German had conceived other than simply Christian motives in the peace centenary movement. In that movement the Kaiser saw the only thing to balk his plan of world power."

The Great German Aim.
"For forty years the Germans have plotted and lied towards the object of world power. I have been in Germany and I will mention things that I saw there which all point to the great German aim, but which I did not recognize as such when I saw them."
"A lady hung a handkerchief on a balustrade outside of her window not in view of the street, and so great is the spy system that in fifteen minutes she was arrested and fined because this was against the law. A gentleman, who read a letter as he was leaving the town, threw the envelope into the road. As he entered the next town he was arrested and punished for breaking the law in the matter of dropping the envelope in the street."
"I know the German mind. If I could impose my mind upon the world I would have that strip of devastated France and Belgium walked off. I would raise in it a monument higher than that gallows from which Haman was hanged, and on it I would have inscribed to be read by all the passers-by: 'Once upon a time the Germans passed here, to stand to their eternal condemnation.'"
"The Germans have attempted the greatest thing in the world. They have got team play down to a science, and efficiency at the highest standard. But the one thing that they have not got is a proper purpose. They have yet to learn that might is not right."
"However long the war may last, some time the sun is going to rise upon a world in which peace rules. Not the peace of the pacifist, for that will never come in our times, but when peace comes a new foundation of peace will have to be built. No peace is possible while the English speaking peoples are apart. No lasting peace can come until the English speaking people come together to stay."

"We have made a great step forward since the peace centenary. The English speaking peoples are inclined to be boastful. The Americans boast from the house top, the Englishman boasts in his actions. But one has only to scratch through the skin to see that they are alike. They speak the same tongue, the tongue that contains the word 'gentleman,' and that word is found in no other language."

Teaching German the Lesson.
"We are going to teach the German the lesson that 'Englishman' has never yet been beaten in war except by Englishmen." We have learned how to save life and we may well leave to Germany the credit of having brought the killing of human beings to its highest point.
"We have found out that unity of the English peoples is essential to the winning of the war. The moment the war is over, the German idea will be ended with the war. I have it on good authority that in the German war office the plans for the next war are made, and every resource that is left in Germany will go into the war of trade and commerce not regarding any of the rules which we observe in commerce. They will apply every trick they can find. A large part of the prosperity of Germany before the war was in stolen patents. A

BEAUTY SPECIALIST TELLS SECRET

A Beauty Specialist Gives Simple Home Made Recipe to Darken Gray Hair.

Mrs. M. D. Gillespie, a well known beauty specialist of Kansas City, recently gave out the following statement regarding gray hair:
"Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home, at very little cost, that will darken gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. To a half pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Orlex Compound and 1-4 ounce of glycerine. These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost, or the druggist will put it up for you. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray haired person look twenty years younger. It does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off."

Sure Way To Get Rid of Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.
By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every dandruff sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.
You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.
You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

TIN HATS? IN LONDON SHOPS.

Made for Women as Well as Men—Some Are Called "Very Smart."

London, Mar. 7.—(Correspondence of Associated Press).—"Tin millinery" is now being exhibited in the windows of London hatshops. Recognition of the protective value of the shrapnel helmet has led to an increasing demand for this form of headgear.

Several firms of outfitters now include "tin hats" as part of their regular stock, and one large London house advertises helmets for both men and women. The helmets designed for the women cost twice as much as those for the men, the difference in price being due to the fact

Hair Often Ruined By Careless Washing

If you want to keep your hair looking its best, be careful what you wash it with. Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.
The best thing for steady use is just ordinary multifid coconut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.
One or two teaspoonsful will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.
You can get multifid coconut oil at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

Just Try This When Hairy Growths Appear

(Modes of Today)
A smooth, hairless skin always follows the use of a paste made by mixing some water with plain powered delatone. This paste is applied to the hairy surface 2 or three minutes, then rubbed off and the skin washed, when every trace of hair will have vanished. No pain or discomfort attends the use of the delatone paste, but caution should be exercised to be sure that you get real delatone.
that the women's helmets are fitted with a superior lining, and have a jaunty little nob on the top.
The advertisements say that the helmets for women have "daintily trimmed linings" and are "very smart."
