WHERE ARE WE AT?

It would be refreshing if someone, of unbiased mind, could give to the citizens of St. John a correct statement as to the present condition of these civic undertakings now in progress; if the stories told by contractors and officials could be made to jibe; and if those things which are hidden by murky excuses were clearly explained. There are two important matters now under way and in spite of oft repeated announcements from city hall and elsewhere the feeling prevails that in both contracts there has been inexcusable blundering.

The water extension should have been completed almost a year ago. Difficulties arose, and the work was delayed. A month or so ago the final work was taken over by the city. The intake pipe in Lake Latimer was not quite clear of the mud, but the city workmen, it was announced, could finish the job in three or four days. Only six or eight yards of dirt had to be removed and a few courses of brick put down. The task would be completed in no time.

This was weeks ago, and it is now practically certain that the water will not be brought to the city for at least a month. Not a spoonful of mud has yet been taken away, so far as can be learned; no particular effort is being made to lower the lake; the new main pipe is not connected; and in fact the whole work is going along in a slipshod manner as though every person connected with it were afraid to move, while those whose duty it is to inform the public are making new excuses each day. Meanwhile property owners continue to pay the high rate of insurance.

The same conditions prevail in regard to the new wharf. D. C. Clark entered into an agreement with the city to build for the city within a specified time, a wharf, on a site which did not exist and which the city did not undertake to provide. The people want to know whether he is going to get through with the job or not. Mr. Clark thinks he is, if he is not delayed. Mr. Mayes, who is doing the dredging says the site for one crib is ready. The officials who are supposed to be in charge are altogether at variance, and tell one story one minute and another story the next. If the site is not placed? What is it doing in the mud at Sand Point? If the site is not ready then those in charge of the work should find out where they are at and stop inventing fairy tales for the public. The plans have been altered several times since the new wharf was first projected, leading to the conclusion that there is not one man in the council or in the civic employ with foresight enough to know what is required.

The only definite thing in view is a series of law suits. The water may or may not come, the wharf may or may not be finished in time, but there will be a whole bunch of actions for damages, as sure as fate.

GENERAL TREPOT.

The death of General Trepot is a blessing to Russia. From the standpoint of human sentiment it is a pity, but not put out of the way years ago, and there will also be a shade of regret that a man who caused such wholesale suffering and misery was allowed to escape to safety by violence. Trepot deserved assassination if any one ever did, but it may be that his death was far more terrible than could be caused by the dagger or the bomb. However, he has gone to his reward or his punishment, and although such a feeling is contrary to all Christian teachings there will be deep satisfaction in the thought that his acts in life have received full justice for his acts in life.

Trepot was by nature an oppressor, a tyrant of the worst type, and fate placed him in a position in which he was able to exercise his peculiar talents. Emperor Nicholas is living under the delusion that to protect his throne he needs such men, and Trepot, looking toward his own advancement, was one of those who filled the emperor's ear with the poison of false counsel. He and others of his class are the ones who are responsible for the struggle through which Russia is now passing, for the suffering, sorrow and death which thousands are compelled to endure, and for the dark days which the future holds. He made the police a scourge; through his ceaseless persecution he lashed the poorer classes into frenzy; and by his remorseless cruelty to all who crossed his path he became the most hated man in Russia. Had it not been for Trepot the empire of the Czar might today, under
