INCREASED FACILITIES NEEDED

the future welfare of St. John now before 'the citizens is that of Increased wharf and warehouse accommodation Only stupidity or an unbelievable perversity of mind could permit any man to argue that the winter por trade has not been of great benefit to this city. The money paid out in wages and for supplies has been a great boon to working men and shop keepers, and that so much work ha been going on in a season which would otherwise be dull is due to the fact that facilities have been provided for handling the traffic. But the business has now outgrown the present facilities. If it is a good thing to have the present wharves and warehouses and the trade they brought, It will be equally good to have more wharves and warehouses and more business The Canadian Pacific Company assure the people that they will provide the freight for the steamers if the terminal facilities are provided. They practically intimate that they might be disposed to provide these also, but for the Oborne says is a daily contribution of $1,100 per day by carrying freight to and from St. John at the same rate as it is carried to and from Portland, Me. Mr. Oborne thinks that if the dominion government would provide the first three berths needed, and do the dredging, the railway and the city might be left to provide additional wharves as needed. Speaking at the Board of Trade rooms on Friday evening, Manager Jones of the Bank of Montreal looked forward to a time when St. John would have 250,000 people, and the harbor front and around to Courtenay Bay. This can only be realized by process of development from year to year. The development The present is no time to sit down at ease and let the trade go by to other ports. The question is not one of party politics, but of national concern. It is Canada's trade for Canada's ports, the notto of Sir Wilfred Laurier himself.

This is no time for hesitation or a weighing of the chances of this or hat political party. The interests of St. John are involved, and so, also, is the future of Canadian trade, Ali parties may fairly join together, and so forcibly and unceasingly press upon the government the importance of prompt action that something may yet be ac-complished before the next winter's whatever urgency there was for a strong and united effort to gain recognition for St. John as a winter port some years ago, exists today. Canada's rade is increasing and St. John has not yet got a fair proportion of the presen business. But it has all that it has

The other day a clergyman in Boston alleged that the women of the present day use as much profanity as their husbands. In that city, where the inhabitants are said to feel their intelled tual oats, little or no attention was apparently taken of the statement: bu the ladies out in Chicago have resented the imputation, that they are on a par with their husbands in the use of winged words. In every other respec the equality is maintained. Mrs. Orrin W. Porter, who speaks as one having authority, gives utterance to the following thought on the matter:-"It is a cruel slander, and a wicked, wicked lie. I have never in all my life heard a lady use an oath. I am convinced that I never shall, if I live to be one hundred years old. The statement would be absurd if it were not so outrageously false and so wickedly untrue."

A careful consideration of the should cause the clergyman to with draw his allegations. So long as these words may be used in polite societ; without breaking any of the ten com mandments or the city and state ordinances concerning profanity, there to an unlawful vocabulary. The ex pressions used by the lady ought to be quite sufficient to relieve the feel-irgs of overwrought and outraged

LACE CURTAINS. The Chicago newspapers say that Mr. Patrick E. McDonnell is having an airship on the dirigible plan built in that city with a view to making a journey to the North Pole next summer. He is confident that his machine will work as the model has proved that his ideas are perfectly feasible. The airship is to be ever 400 feet in length. Dr. Andree thought that his plans were perfectly practicable when he started for the North Pole in a balloon, but he perlahed somewhere in the Arctic waste, nobody knows where. One theory as to his fate has attracted some attention and perhaps it may acquait for the disastreus outcome of his lepes.

theory as to his fate has attracted some attention and perhaps it may acquent for the disastrous outcome of his Lopes. It has been observed on the inner ice cap of Greenland, a mile or more above the sea, that even on the finest days any object is likely to become coated on the windward side, during the hours when the sun is lowest, with a thick layer of hear fapst. One side of a tent may thus be covered to the to the depth of nearly an inch, the weight of the tent cloth being thereby greatly increased. The pole to which the dogs are tied may seem to be nearly twice as thick as it really is on account of the hoar frost on pne side of it. Suppose that Andree met with a similar phenomenon when his balloon was a mile or more in the air; what woud be the probable effect on his air-ship? All who have expressed opinions on this question seem to be of one mind about it; they think that the added weight would be foo great, that the buoyancy of the balloon would be overcome and that it would sink into the sea. This was a contingency that seems not to have occurred to Andree. He thought of nearly everything that might possibly happen and was ingenious and plausible in his plans for meeting every difficulty he forsaw, but he went away before attention had been called to the above mentioned peculiarity observed in the upper air of the Arctic regions. The day has not yet come to plume airships for any ambitious flights. Anybody who should launch an airship in the high North in the present state of knowledge would be likely 'to' find more problems than are dreamed of in his philosophy. Manchester Robertson Allison

Andrew Lang was 58 years old last month. He has written a book for every year of his life. From the 'Politics of Aristotle' to the 'Red Book of

He has written, indeed, for everything and for everybody—on dreams, ghosts, magic, fairlies, hymns, Tennyson, Scotland and CHICAGO, April 25.—"If the clergy of the Methodist Episcopal church expect to keep their young men and women in the field they must do away with old restrictions against card playing, dancing, the attendance at the theatres. If they are not allowed to follow the dictates of their conscience than will attend churches where they will be allowed to or they will not attend church at all."

This in substance was the declaration set forth at a dinner at the Union League club attended by 65 prominent Methodist ministers and laymen of Chicago. The proposition received general discussion in which Bishop Hamilton, L. D., Condee and Robert Quayle took leading parts.

"If we do not take active steps toward arousing interest in the church on the part of our young men and women we shall stand alone in our old age, there will be none to take the burden from our shoulders when we pass away," said Mr. Quayle. "If we seek to bind the young people down too closely or draw too tight the reins we cannot hope to keep them with us.
"I recommend that all laymen and clergymen to whom the interests of the Methodist church are dear organize around this question and insist that at the next general conference the present regulations and restrictions be removed."

Another important movement set on foot at the meeting was the consolidation of all the book interests and periodicals of the church in this country.

CAPT DUNNING REMEMBERED.

Although Capt. Thos. Dunning kept his contemplated departure for active service in South Africa a secret to the last moment, his friends were not caught napping. It only took a few hours for them to rally in force and give the genial officer a hearty farewell. On Saturday evening he was waited on by a delegation of the officers and members of the Union Lodge of Portland, No. 11, A. F. and A. M., when F. G. Knowlton, senior warden of the lodge, presented him, on their behalf, with a handsome pair of field glasses. The presentation speech and Mr. Dunning's reply, if brief, were to the point.

on Saturday night, Mr. Bond of Carvill Hall, where Mr. Dunning has been for some time a popular and esteemer resident, gave a supper in his honor it was one of the festive feasts that in matter of appointments as well as good cookery, have made Mr. Bond famous as a caterer. The residents of the house and a few of Mr. Dunning's congenial friends filled the tables. The chair was occupied by the Rev. Dr. Fraser, who had Captain Dunning on his right and Sheriff Ritchie on his left, while E. H. McAlpine diled the vice-chair. The toust list was appropriate and the speeches timely as well as witty. Rev. Dr. Fraser gave the King, which was duly honored, and E. H. McAlpine excelled his record in proposing Capt. Dunning, who responded in eloquent terms. F. C. Gates replied to the toast of the United States, and Majors Edwards and Hartt to the Military. There were songs by Major Hartt, W. Greig, J. J. Berry, F. C. Gates, P. Longley, Capt. Dunning and Mr. Burnett of England. Daniel Mullin, K. C., in an eloquent speech called for the host, who responded in his customary modest form. The occasion was a most enthusiastic tribute to Capt. Dunning's personal popularity in St. John, and an evidence of the interest with which his career on the stern battlefield will be followed by churches Crowded.

St. John is usually a very quiet city on Sunday, but yesterday was an ux-ception, there being a general rush of citizens from all quarters to the Opera House, York Theatre, Main treet Papar tist church and Calvin church, where services were held under the auspices of the management of the Boys' Mission, of which Mr. Whitney is the leading spirit. Mr. Whitney has been working hard of late to awaken public interest in his movement, and Curing the past mouth has held a number of Sunday afternoon meetings at the Opera House, at which prominent citizens have spoken and in which special attention has been given to the musical particular of the members of the Westminster Abbey Choir, Mr. Whitney arranged three meetings for yesterday afternoon, at which the boy soprane, Percy Phillips, was to sing. The three large auditoriums were not sufficient to accommodate all, and at the last the disposal of Mr. Whitney. This, however, only partially relieved the pressure, and hundreds were unable to even get inside any of the four building.

At the Opera House Rev. Mr. Beatty conducted the service, Mr. Bullock at the disposal of Mr. Whitney. This, however, only partially relieved the pressure, and hundreds were unable to even get inside any of the four building.

At the Opera House Rev. Mr. Beatty conducted the service, Mr. Bullock and the principal speaker was Rev, J. A. Richardson. At Calvin church A. S. J. Armstrong presided and Rev. Mr. Sellar addressed the gathering. At Main street church D. J. Purdy occupied the chair and Rev. H. B. Nobles delivered an interesting address. The star at the chair, at all the meetings.
