Next came Wm. Johnston, constable, leading Tony and behind came Seppeli with Radcliffe. They were led out through the back door of the court house, and as Tony passed through the kitchen he turned to some men sitting there and pleasantly said "Good morning."

THREE MASTED ICEBERG PASSED BY STEAMER

Anchor Line Passengers Got a Little Nervous When the Cold Storage Plant Rove in View. NEW YORK, May 4.—The first three masted iceberg ever seen in the Atlantic was sighted by the officers of the Anchor Line California, which arrived here yesterday from Glasgow. The big berg which was called the "Lutania of the Arctic," was about 300 feet longer than the fast Canadian presented much more freedom. Through a glass an officer said he could see the outline of a fairly good rig of the foremast, but the main and mizen appeared to be stripped of their frosty sails. This ice mountain struck terror to the hearts of timid passengers when it stood out plainly to them after the sudden clearing of a thick fog. The California was steam at reduced speed through the fog when the vapor cleared suddenly and the sun shone on the glistering berg. It was about a mile and a half dead ahead.

CANADA

was working for him At least that's the way he explained his business success. "I got tired of the old system of hiring men that you have to pay whether they work or not," said he. "And so now I get the post office to bring me my orders and deliver my goods." "But who solicits your orders?" was the question. "The mail man," said he, "and does it thoroughly for it reaches thousands of homes and business places." Call main 95
