I have taken a number of proprietary medicines, but found very little relief from any of them I was influenced to give South American Nervine a trial, and I must confess that it has done me more good than any other medicine I have ever taken, or medicial treatment of whatever kind received. From the first few dosse I found great relief. In all I had taken six bottles, and an truthfully say that South American Nervine is the one medicine that has effected a cure in my case. Would the thousands of § suffering women in all perts of this Dominion be relieved of all this rouble?—then seek South American Nervine. To the discouraged mother it will give quick relief, and return to her the much dasired health and strength. Working immediately upon the nerve centres, as science has demonstrated, it cannot fail to cure. In this important respect it differs altegether from every other medicine—it is not any mere experiment to use it.

one or two uses of Pearline will have to be talked to. Why is she throwing away all the gain and help that she can get from it in other ways? If you have proved to yourself that Pearline washes clothes, for instance, in the easiest, quickest, safest way, you ought to be ready to believe that Pearline is the best for washing and cleaning everything. That's the truth, anyway. Try it and see. Into every drop of water that's to be used for cleansing anything, put some Pearline.

then rolled out of sight. There was an immediate rush and scramble; every one looked and hunted, but no bit of gold. Then the music struck up, and they turned, one and all, to the big dinning room, which had been cleared for dancing. "We'll leave that until morning," said the general; "it cannot be far off."

There is nothing like a string orchestrator ender the delightful German waltzes, and nothing like rarified mountain air to add a wonderful sweetness and strength to the tones.

and a wonderful sweetless and the tones.

On a rock, in the deepest shadow, sat a woman swaying to and fro in rhy thmic time to the music.

Once she spoke. 'It's most as good as a meloden!"

Once she spoke. It a miss as go, stepping carefully in the dark; a step or two brought her in the light, and there, directly in her path, lay a bit of something bright.

She stoop quickly and picked it up hurrying involuntarily toward the hotel steps.

amount, she crept steating the powter sugar bowl.

"Poor Lyddy!" she said wistfully.
"I wish it was more; but won't she be surprised!"

She peered into the depths of the bowl; something gleamed and glistened on top. She brought it to the window and looked in carefully this time. She stood quite still, almost petrified under the force of her discovery.

Walking softly into the darkened kitchen, she sat down in the darkest corner, and throwing her apron over her head cried like a child.

A little later she appeared before Lyddy, her old hat drawn well over her eyes:

"Goin" out ?" queried she in surprise.

"Yes, Lyddy; I'm goin' up to the hotel.
Pears they lost some money there last night, and I found it; I've got to take it back, you know."

"Of course," said Lyddy faintly.
Then Sairy did a most unusual thing:
She stopped suddenly and platted a kiss on Lyddy's shamed face as tenderly as if it we'e a baby's, and went out on her mission.
"Poor Lyddy's jest like her mother!"

mingham car ran over and killed a dun-colored pug dog on Smithfield street near Virgin alley. The tragedy was seen by a small frowsy terrier, who ran up to the deal and bleeding body and smelled it. He utterdd a plain'ive whine or two, and then lay down on the pavement beside it. Another car came rattling along and drove the terrier to one side. He continued closely for the purpose of aggravating the terrier, and he chased some of them several rods.

When any person crossed the street near the body, the terrier flaw at him and bark ed viciously. He made no attempt to bite any one, but showed his teeth. As soon any one, but showed his teeth. As soon as the intruder turned away, the terrier ceased his barking and lay down again on the pavement. Part of the time he sat on the sidewalk, but he was instantly in the street if any man, woman, or child came within aix teet of the carcass. Bootblacks and newsboys approached the dead body closely for the purpose of aggravating the terrier, and he chased some of them several rods.

All attempts to coax him away were unavailing. Now and then he ran out into the street, smelled at the body, and dropped a tear. He had several narrow escapes from passing cars. The strangest incident occured about 6 o'clock. A passing wagon touched the dead dog and threw it across the car rail. The terrier instantly darted forth, seized the body, and dragged a foot away from the rail. It must have been that he desired to protect the body from futher mutilation. Many persons who witnessed the act were astonished.

During all the evening the sidewalks on both sides of the street were lined with men and boys, watching the peculiar proceeding. Some of the City Hall men feared that the faithful terrier would meet death himself. Inspector McKelvey hired two both lacks to end the affair. One of them teased the terrier and enticed him some distance away, when the other boy snatched up the carcass and ran with it down Virgin alley. The terrier returned, and for half an hour searched up and down the street. At last he gave up, and sadly trotted off Virgin alley toward Grant street.

bright. She stoop quickly and picked it up hurrying involuntarily toward the hotel steps. Half way across the veranda the music again burst forth, wailing and cryng. She paused irresolutely a moment, a deep flush spreading slowly over her face, and a frightened look crept into her eyes. The thin fingers closed about the gold. Exeryly retracing her steps, Lyddy stumbled over the rocky road through the darkness to the old red house. Sunrise found Sairy stepping softly about the kitchen with an anxious face, for Lyddy was il and lay upon the haircloth sofa in the best room, two bright spots burning in either cheek. The afternoon found Lyddy no better. Siry carried the eggs to the hotel herself, while Lyddy was sleeping. Coming back she overtook a neighbor driving home. Good afternoon! Can you give me a lift? Lyddy's sick," she said simply. "Climb right in! 'Taint often anyone gits a chance to do you folks a favor," was the hearty response. Jolting over the rocks was not conducive to conversation; nevertheless, Sairy heard mora news in the short ride than she had listened to in a month. "They're goin' to heve a big time up to the hote!," he announced, as sha, was climbing over the wheels at her own gate. "A paradin' in coaches; took up a collection to hire my big wagon; the general, he gave 'em a clean ten dollar gold piece." A paradin' in coaches; took up a collection to hire my big wagon; the general, he gave 'em a clean ten dollar gold piece. The continued, as Sairy thanked him and entered the house. Sha counted the eggs more carefully. It will spare that! 'she said decidedly. 'I can get along without my meat while Lyddy's ick; she won't know.' Taking a crisp dollar bill from the small amount, she crept stealthily into the cupboard and reached up for the pewter sugar bowl. "Proof Lyddy!" she said wistfully.
