

Speaking Tour Through Canada

Experienced Workers With Boys Will Visit Over Fifty Cities.

A speaking tour through Canada by experienced workers with boys has been arranged whereby over fifty cities will be visited during the months of September, October and November. The meetings are being held under the auspices of men's organizations and women's clubs.

The speakers visiting the Maritime Provinces are Taylor Station, of Toronto, and O. J. Atkinson, of New York City. They will arrive in this city from Fredericton on the morning of September 27th, and will address a meeting of the Rotary Club at noon, while in the evening they will speak before the Women's Canadian Club. Local boy problems will be discussed in an intimate way and from common-sense and non-partisan standpoints. The general theme will be "Conserving the Boy Asset of the Community," with constructive suggestions for preventing juvenile delinquency and the development of useful Canadian citizenship. The visitors will leave on the midnight train for Halifax, where they will make addresses the following day.

Taylor Station has been the National Boys' Work Secretary of the Canadian National Council of the Y. M. C. A. for several years, previous to which he was a prominent leader in work for boys in Toronto. He had had an experience of over twenty years in dealing with boys and planning for their welfare. Mr. Station is making the present trip, not in the interest of his own organization, but to advance a unified community effort that will give every boy a chance to make good.

O. J. Atkinson is a Canadian who has been in boys' work for forty-six to forty years in Canada and six years as executive secretary of the Boys' Club Federation (International), with headquarters in New York City.

Miss Irma Poole, of the Bank of Montreal staff, Yarmouth, N. S., accompanied by her friend, Miss Ruth Gaton, of the Yarmouth Fruit Co., are spending their vacation in the city, the guests of Mrs. J. A. Brooks, 31 High street.

UNIFORM AN OFFENCE IN THE IRISH CITIES

English Woman Finds it Difficult to Buy When With Soldier Son.

By LYDIA K. COMMANDER.
(Copyright, 1920, by Cross-Atlantic.)

London, Sept. 17.—A visit to Ireland makes it abundantly plain that all an Englishwoman is "agin the Gov'mint" and not against English people individually.

The mother of a young officer stationed in Ireland, who has just returned from a visit to her son, told me some amusing experiences proving this point. "I soon discovered that all our comfort depended upon whether Jack wore his uniform or was in civvies," she explained. "It was a strange sensation to be met one moment in a friendly spirit, and the next—civil and distant, so to speak; all because my son had changed his clothes. At first it left me slightly bewildered, as our French friends would say. But after a short time I realized it was a game, quite a stern little game, but a game played with fixed rules and regulations."

Uniform An Offence.

"In Ireland, of all places, personalities are vulgarities, no word passed, but I was given clearly to understand that the King's uniform was an offence to the Irish republic. In my turn I shrugged my shoulders, metaphorically, and smiled back that the republic was objectionable to His Majesty's Government."

"I added a piquancy to life, speculating whether the mental tortures would be stormy or fine every time I started up the wide street of the village. Every main street in Ireland is wide. There must be plenty of space in a country where the thoroughfare does duty as a club for the adult members of the population, a playground for the children, and a resting-place for all stray or lonely animals."

"All this adds to the picturesque appearance of the village, which is as irregular in its architecture as in its habits."

"Here a small village with thatched roof hunches its shoulders into a lordly erection of brick and stucco, the product of American dollars, for the sale of 'Spirits' and other 'Malt Liquors.' There a tiny shop is squeezed between two big houses as if making mute appeal for the right to live."

"But what about the uniform? You haven't explained its magic, black or white, yet," I suggested.

"Oh, yes! The uniform!" she responded. "I discovered its influence on the third day. We had a furnished cottage and a maid for my visit—I stayed three months; and the latter was well stocked up on my arrival on Saturday."

Out of Supplies.

"On Monday, at noon I strolled up the street to meet my son on his way home from barracks, and to replenish the stores. Jack is a jolly, good-natured boy, but very proud of the King's uniform, and I am proud with and for him. On the way home we entered together the principal shop, owned by a typical Irishman of the respectable short-keeping class, whose name I had taken pains to learn."

"Good-morning, Mr. O'Flynn," I remarked in my best shopping tones; "I want a tin of sandalwood, and can I have some butter?"

"Mr. O'Flynn gazed steadily at Jack, pimpled and such blemishes. Her ambitions are first a home, then children and then her appearance."

Then: "I am sorry, ma'am, I am out of sandalwood, and the butter is gone." The voice was chilly, and the owner peered inexorably to a yellow block of "marg."

"Later in the day, on our way to the golf links, I determined to supplement the commissariat with cheese and a tin of peaches. My son, now in civvies, had his clubs swung over his shoulders. He removed his tweed cap (Irish fashion) as he entered the shop."

"The morning atmosphere cleared at once like magic. Mr. O'Flynn, all smiles, informed me that his supply of cheese was abundant and of the best, and as he handed me the peaches he edged that he had discovered some sandalwood. In a meek voice I once more inquired about butter, to be told that some nice fresh rolls had just come in."

"Having completed my purchases, I began to pick up my parcels. But Mr. O'Flynn would have none of that. He took them from my hand."

"Not at all. What you'd be carrying them for? Sure the boy 'll run up with them this minute. Are you there, Mike? Leg up and leave those things at once."

"Supper was assured. I left the shop, feeling I was no longer an enemy alien under my own flag."

AUTO TRAGEDIES INCREASE.

New York, Sept. 17.—Statistics which have just been tabulated by the Health Bureau show that 167 persons were killed by automobiles in New York during 1919 and 398 during the first seven months of 1920. Over fifty per cent. of the victims were under fifteen years of age.

Beauty's Ambition

To Rid the Face of Pimples and Such Blemishes is a Step Toward Life's Chief Accomplishment.

One of the most aggravating conditions to any woman is the presence of pimples and such blemishes. Her ambitions are first a home, then children and then her appearance.

One of the greatest blessings she can have is a fine, fair skin on face, neck and arms. The use of Stuart's Calcium Wafers now and then for the blood condition makes this possible. Women are great sufferers from skin disorders and hence their complexions are marred because of this fact.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers give you a complexion that rivals the ideal of an artist to produce. By acting upon the skin and blood they thus contribute to a more beautiful complexion. Get a 66-cent box of these wonder wafers from any druggist anywhere.

Gasoline Economy Coast to Coast

In a continuous run of 3,442 miles from New York to San Francisco in July an Overland stock car averaged 32.64 miles to the Imperial gallon.

Made-in-Canada duplicates of this car are giving their Canadian owners the same kind of economy proofs.

The Overland dealer at Lander, Sask., made a test on a 288 mile trip from Regina, and his car gave him 35 miles to the gallon.

While roads were still partly frozen, a Bridgewater, N.S., owner tested his Overland over 107 miles of rutted roads, and got 26.75 miles to the gallon.

A St. Hyacinthe, Que., traveller recently covered 630 miles at an average gas mileage of 30 to the gallon.

A Toronto business man drove to Kitchener and back, making 31.88 miles to the gallon.

A Minnesota, Min., farmer reports getting as high as 34 miles to a gallon.

Triplex Springs contribute to Overland's economy of operation as well as to its comfort—for a demonstration see
