"He said to you that he thought that for his trouble he should get $1,000?"

"Yes."

"When did he say that?"

"Well, as I received these letters or telegrams I showed them to Mr. Campbell."

"That is to say, you kept Mr. Campbell, who is the president of the company, advised as to the progress of matters as they were going on?"

"Yes."

"That is to say, you were candid in disclosing everything to him?"

"Yes."

"During the progress of the negotiations?"

"Yes."

"Did you disclose to him that you had written to Mr. Foster offering to divide the commission?"

"Well, I think that was disclosed by the telegram which he—"

"Which telegram?"

"The telegram mentioning the commission?"

"The one you sent?"

"No, the one I received from Mr. Foster."

"Then up to that time had Mr. Campbell suggested that the $1,000 should be paid to him?"

"No, it was when the thing was finally going through, when it was a bargain."

"So that nothing was said by him as to the division of the commission until the matter was ready to close?"

"Yes, that is right."

"Just what was said?"

"Well, he said, 'I think that it would be to your advantage to give me $1,000 of this commission.'"

"What did he mean by that?"
