Geo. V. Rand,

there work in my heart a sorthing,
I never had known before,
With wings that wildly fluttered,
And my soul grew fretted and sore
What was meant by the wings futtered
I knew not and could not know,
But I climbed the narrow pathway
Where the laurel and bay tree grow And the wings they seemed to lift me,
Without my will or choice,
Till I stood on the mount's fair summi
Alone with a might yoice;
The voice spoke in me, and thro' me,
And broke out in 'rapturous song,
And now mid laurel and bay trees,
I am singing the whole day long.
