BADDECK

And its Exhibition of Ye Goods and Chattels of Ye Olden Times.

The citizens of Baddeck and outlying districts are again indebted to the Ladies Literary club of Baddeck for a very pleasant and profitable entertainment, in the form of a loan exhibition of old and rare articles, which was held in the Gertrude Hall, Baddeck on the 16th, 17th and 18th, of October.

This club, believing evidently, that woman's sphere is not only in the domestic but in the literary and social world as well, endeavor to impart some of the knowledge they receive through the medium of their society, to the sterner sex who are excluded from their meetings. Therefore at frequent intervals public meetings are held under their auspices, when outsiders are invited to hear lectures from such men as Prof. Bell of Telephone fame; Mr. George Kennan, the Siberian traveller; and the noted lecturer. Hon. Gardiner Hubbard, president of the Geographical society of Washington; Major Powell, the accomplished and able director and organizer of the largest geological survey in the world, who, it may be remarked in passing, so ably came to the rescue when aspersions were cast in "The Week" upon the work of the geological survey of our own Dominion. Major Powell lectured on the Grand canon of the Colordo, and his lecture had the deepest interest for us, knowing that he was the first man to explore that tremendous gorge, of which Stead say: "It is the most awe-inspiring, terrible and wonderful place in the United States." Mr. E J. Glave, one of Stanley's pioneer officers, is another of the noted men who lectured for us. He is the author of "In Savage Africa," in the preface to which Stanley himself says: "Many people have called me hard, but they are always those whose presence a field of work could best despense with, and whse nobility is too nice to be stained with toil. Glave is not one of these, but a man who relishes a task for its bigness, and takes to it with fierce joy. In the meantime, however let him indulge his literary aspirations and for relief handle his pen and pencil in delineating some of his early experiences in African pioneering. I think he can do it well to the pleasure of many stay-at home readers" That he can do it well, with voice as with pen, to the pleasure of stay-at-home hearers, we gladly testify.

But the club do not stop at lectures. When occasions arise they indulge in celebrations, such as on Nov. 17th, 1892, a Columbian celebration, and on July 6th, 1893, a celebration of the nuptials of the Duke of York, which we venture to assert was not surpassed in elaborate preparations and loyal expressions by any in the Dominion. The club sent a congratulatory cablegram to Prince George, and received a very cordial reply. The latest celebration was in honor of the third anniversary of the organization of the club.

The people had but short notice, yet they responded readily to the request of the directors to loan their treasures, by sending their quota of relics of olden times to deck the building, and delight the heart of the seeker after curios. In some cases the collections of individuals were very large, numbering fifty pieces of extreme age and great interest. Not only did the board of directors surprise themselves, by the magnitude of the exhibition, but they surprised the public as well, for all found a rare treat before them, embracing a variety of articles from many countries. On entering we noticed to our right, a very complete Greenland exhibit, to the most striking points of which we refer briefly. A miniature igloo or Esquimaux house, not the generally supposed snowhut, but a comfortable cabin built of moss and stones, with a roof of reindeer skin and an ordinary window; Esquimaux showshoes or skees, consisting of thin boards perhaps 5ft. long and 6 inches wide, covered with skin and having a leather strap to fasten to the foot; different garments worn by natives; photographs some taken by an Esquimaux, others by Mr. Peary; fishfloats, dog harness, stocking formed of skin with the hairy side inward; moccasins and mats, the work of the women; beautifully beaded and embroidered vests and pockets, etc., and we were even invited to partake of the Esquimaux bread.

This exhibit is a very comprehensive one, and belongs to Mr. Hoppen and Mr. Sutherland of Baddeck, who were pasengers on the il-fated ship Miranda. Near by is a beautiful robe made of the skins of the eider-duck from Denmark; a pair of felt boots such as are worn by Russian peasants; here also are leather boots and mittens, worn by Siberian exiles.

On the opposite side the hall presents a decidedly oriental appearance. Here are many Indian and African exhibits, such as old blankets made and worn by Navajo Indians, but no longer made by them; sash belts, beautifully woven; straw mats from Africa; a punka or large fan, being one of a number sent to the White House to be used when President Garfield was ill; dainty Indian baskets very flexible and fine from Alaska; corn baskets made by Indians; heathen gods, one a tiny figure of Buddha, very old, another, a soapstone figure of an idol, India; African wood; African fan 7 years old; old Chinese fan; shawl from Central America; a girdle from Mexico, sent to Mrs. Bell by Carl Lumholtz, the distinguished traveller, and author of "Among Cannibals." He is now living among wild Mexican Indians, as one of them, sharing their tents and learning their language. The girdle was made after an old pattern by a very ancient tribe of Indians who are cave dwellers; here, too, are Indian shoes, and leggings worn by an Indian chief in the North West rebellion.

A glass case in the centre of the hall seemed to be the attraction of the building judging by the crowd that clustered round it. This is the old jewelery and silver department, and prove very interesting. Perhaps the oldest article in the whole collection is the following: A Tartar woman's hair ornament, worn at the end of a long braid. It is composed of coins and a seal. The coins are the Russian rouble of the time of Katherine second, the seal being old, and was the official seal of the governor of a town on the Persian gulf, which has not been in existence for 600 years. The inscription is in Arabic and translated reads, "Have mercy on me, since Mohammed approves me." This belongs to Mrs. Kennan. There are many interesting old coins such as Kopek pieces of the time of Cathrine I., 1727. Coins of Sigismund 3rd king of Poland, 1586-1632. Old Mexican and Russian coins of 1770, time of Ivan the Terrible; old Caucasian and Turkish coins from year of Hegira 1141 to 1763 A. D, halfpenny tokens and coins of George IV., also French, Spanish and old Roman coins.

Mrs. Susan McKenzie, of Middle River, exhibits a great many old gold and silver buckles, pins and broaches, a handsome silver snuff-box, and old rings, some of them for the thumb.

Mr. B. E. Tremaine shows a diamond knee buckle, 260 years old. It belonged at one time to the late Chief Justice Dodd, first judge of the Island of Cape Breton, to whom it descended from his father; Mr. Emsley shows an odd old sugar spoon. Here is an ivory stud worn in the lower lip by some of the tribes of Africa; there, an ear-ring from West Thibet, from the collection of the Earl of Dunsmore. It is old silver, large and semi-circular in form, and is set with Turquoises, 25 in number, Mrs. Kennan's; Russian jewelery and money dredged up from the River Irtish, in Western Siberia—about 200 years old; Russian teaspoon, inlaid with colored enamels; a Turkish belt buckle shaped like a butterfly, which was an heirloom in the family of one of the early missionaries to Constantinople; a miniature locket or broach of gold, the property of Mrs. Alex. Macdonald, of Nyanza. It descended to her from an aged aunt in Scotland, who was one of the clan Cameron, to which clan belonged the Cameron of Lochiel, so famous in song and story. Sets of peasant jewelery, formerly from Brittany in France at least 200 years old. It is formed of crystal, silver mounted and was purchased by Mrs. Bell in 1892, of a Florentine lady, at Florence, Italy, in whose family this set had been for 100 years, and was sold on account of poverty, her husband having committed suicide by drowning in the river Po; old Mongolian badge from Southern Siberia; rings taken from the French at the siege of Louisburg; old silver decanter stands, sugar tongs of antiquated form, 200 years old; teaspoon and saltspoon bearing the stamp of George I; Silver salt cellars bearing the same stamp. They are shaped like a round pot and stand on three legs. A silver urn which was presented to Mr. Malcom Campbell, of Coll, Scotland, grandfather of Mr. S. C. Campell, Baddeck, as a mark of esteem for his bravery in going to the rescue of a ship in a gale; Giant McAskill's ring, or rather the third part of it in width. Its diameter is about 1½ inches. It was worn on the fourth finger. Here, too are three odd pipes, each with a different history. One said to have been used by Patrick Stuart, the cruel duke of Shetland, of whom it is said, that when building a castle he ordered the peasants to supply him with eggs to strengthen the mortar. When they did not bring enough to satisfy him he hanged them on an iron hook. Another pipe is shown by Miss McIvor, a German one, and was given to her father, George McIvor, as a wedding gift in 1831. The third is said to have been smoked by the first bishop of Sweden, Jarl Heffler, about 1600 A. D. Here, too, is a piece of the "Mayflower," of 1620. Next is a set of wooden steeds, caparisoned with gaily decorated harness. This is Florentine cart and carriage harness. It is bright light metal, bearing pictures of the Saviour, the Virgin Mary, Saints, etc, made by hand, the artist hammering out the lines with fine or coarse pointed nails. This, with a Colorado cowboy's outfit is ownded by Mr. Bell.

There are many iron implements and odd weapons of great age, which have a distinct history of their own, many of them telling of gory fields of battle. We shall note only a few of the oldest. Waffle irons used for baking cakes in the old fashioned fire-place, very heavy, over 100 years of age; old lamp called a cruse, like a tiny frying pan with an upright handle. It was used with tallow and a piece of cloth for a wick; here, too, is an even older form of lamp, said to be the lamp of scripture came from Palestine. An iron box sent by Miss Ann McDonald, Big Hill, is interesting. It belonged to her great-grand father and was given by him to her father who was a private in the British army. At the battle of Waterloo, in which he took part, he used is as a receptacle for important papers; A French dirk found in the ruins of Louisburg, the handle of which is formed of a goat's hoof, is very odd. Mortar from Louisburg—very heavy—it is disputed whether this was used as a fire arm or a mortar for grinding, of which the pestle is missing; sword worn by Malcolm McInnis at the seige of Sebastapool; ancient looking pistol formed of wood mounted with iron, used in the time of Cromwell by Hector McLean of Duart. But as we are peace loving citizens and know nothing of the art of war, we take leave of these uncanning things and pass on to the books, pictures and papers booth.

Of old books there are a least 100, the most attractive in appearance being two rare copies of Hogarth's works printed in 1833, and beautifully illustrated with steel engraving, property of Mrs. Clarke, Baddeck. There are bibles of different sizes and ages, one in two volumes being 194 years old; here are old books in the French, Mic-Mac, Gaelic and Greenland languages; an authentic account of an embassy from the King of Great Britain to the Emperor of China printed in 1798; history of Don Quixote and his Dulcena, 1771; reflections upon Ridicule, 1700; and a very fetching novel entitled "The Fool of Quality," by Mr. Brooks, printed in 1767 and owned by Hon. C. J. Campbell. The longing to be original and do startling things is evidently not confined to the nineteenth century, for on opening this book we find the words "Dedicated to the Public! Why don't you dedicate to Mr. Pitt? Because Sir, I would rather set forth my own talents than the virtues and praises of the best man on earth. I love to say things that no one else ever thought of, extraordinary, quite out of the common way. I scorn to echo the voice of every one that goes the road" The language is clear and concise, but paradoxical—for instance description of a company. "There was Sir Christopher Cloudy, who knew much but said nothing, with his very conversible lady who scarce knew by halves, but spoke by wholesale. In the same range was Sir Standish Stately, who in all companies held the first place—in his own esteem," etc., etc. There are old letters here dated 1789, 1811 and 1842, belonging to Mrs. McKenzie, also a commission from Governor Wenthworth, appointing John Patterson first-lieutenant of Picton regiment of militia under Col. Robert Logan. It bears the date of 1793. The china and bric-a-brac form a delightful collection, for there are cups, saucers and plates that are 100 years old and upwards, as well as some modern but peculiar articles. Here are tall, antique silver candlesticks, with silver tray and snuffers; and brass, wooden and straw candlesticks, which were used to hold, no the wax tapers of our day, but flaring tallow dips; some of these are 150 years old. Copper kettles, old tea pots—some of iron, —old vases, venetian and porclain, which no doubt in their day held nosegays of London pride, southern wood, and little Benjamin, while others would display musk and Columbine. A cup of very delicate china, with a deep saucer of the same, looked very old. The cup was made without a handle showing it to be aged. It descended to its present owner, Mrs. John Campbell, from an ancestor who was employed in the family of Lord McNeil of Barra, and is considered to be 220 years old, another of 250 years old, is of peculiar style; The edge is scalloped and the design is in deep colors, and looks as if hand painted—Mrs. Abner Crowdis. Three plates with very beautiful designs are of Royal Dresden China; they were used at the White House during the administration of President Washington; here are tiny mugs, used for coffee in olden times; old lustre pitchers, dishes in willow pattern; toilet bottle of porcelain, belonging to Mrs McDonald, of Middle River, brought from Holland in 1744; Turkish bowls, some iron inlaid with silver, some copper; Japanese, Russian and Sweedish mugs; an odd Moorish pitcher; Zuni Indian vase, Mexican plate and water jar; pitcher made of macerated confederate notes; horn spoon which came from Scotland 104 years ago, it was then an old relic. The most striking article in this corner is modern. It is a lamp shade of spun glass, which was brought from the World's Fair. It is quite soft and pliable and has a delicate golden sheen. The inventor made a dress of the same material. The body of the body of the lamp is made of porcelain overlaid with gold leaf. Two ladies of Washington, named Healey, experimented for a number of years to find a method of plating China with gold so as to withstand the action of heat and water. After a long time, they succeeded in covering a cup and saucer in this way; but they lost the art or forgot the proportions, and experimented for two years more before succeeding, the result of which appears in this lamp.

Some of the articles, particularly the old dresses, needlework and lace, have a curious old-world flavor, with their delicate aroma of lavender. As we stand before them, we can almost fancy that we stand before them, we can almost fancy that we see a maiden of long ago, decked in these empire gowns and rich old laces, dancing the stately minuet, or evoking a weird old ballad from the ancient spinnet.

What memories and fancies crowd upon us as we read this ticket. "Lace worn by the Countess de Sombrieul, one of the ladies in waiting at the court of Marie Antoinette, the wife of Louis XVI, King of France, 130 years ago; and given by the countess to the grand mother of Mrs. Coulston, who was governess in the countess' family." It bring to our mind Burke's panegric and his words of enthusiastic admiration of the "once brightest of Queens.' "Surely never lighted on this orb, which she hardly seemed to touch, a more delightful vision. . . . . glittering like the morning star full of life and splendor and joy."

Among the oldest dresses are some beautifully preserved in the collection of Mrs. McKenzie, as well as an Indian shawl of richest design and a sampler 160 years old. Some quaint gowns worn by Mrs. Wilson in her girlhood, about 1820, are very attractive; while Infants' clothing and other needle work, done by Mrs. Wilson's mother in 1836, are among the finest we have ever seen. One square or shawl of India muslin has over 30 different lace paterns, of finest workmanship, in the border. Other needlework very beautifully executed shown by Mrs. A. Taylor, was done by her mother, the late Mrs. Munroe, who taught this sort of work in her sewing class at Boularderie 50 years ago.

A heavy knitted counterpane is the work of Mrs Munroe's mother, Mrs. Weir, of Dunoon, Scotland. Here is lace made of seaweed looking much like silk and a hat of seaweed 100 years old; caps and purses of the same age—many old shawls, one of silk barege curiously figured owned by Mrs. McRae, Bentick Farm, some silk, some canton crape and others of the finest wool; veils of old design and large size, besides many other quaint old things which we have no time to examine. Many of these relics are the heirlooms which our forefathers from Scotland and the New England States, treasured for generations before they deserted their homesteads, some of whom did this rather than take up arms against their king; and if we but read it aright, they tell a tale of heroism and constancy to king and country as well as of tenacious adherence to old treasures, which we would do well to imitate. Many more articles of great interest and value are here unnoticed, but we feel that we have inflicted ourselves too long already on the patience of your readers. This exhibition although so hastily got up, was a succes in every sense of the word. It was purely local, all the exhibits belonging to Baddeck and surrounding farming sections; and we feel assured the Ladies Club are thankful to all who so kindly contributed to this unique entertainment.

Baddeck, C. B. Oct. 30th, 1894.

C. O. Foss, Esq., C. E., Supt. N. S. Central Railway, N. S, writes: "I keep K. D. C. constantly on hand. I should not know how to get on without it. For many years I have suffered with indigestion and acidity of the stomach. I tried a great many remedies but found no thorough relief till I tried K. D. C. I have recommended it to many others, and in every case with beneficial results I have also found it an excellent corrective in cases of summer complaint."

JOYFUL MOURNING.

Jews Hold a Mock Funeral Over the Death of the Czar.

BOSTON, Nov. 4—A mock service of rejoicing over the death of the Czar of all the Russias was held in Memorial hall, at the South of Boston Friday evening.

All Salem St. was in attendance, and 2000 Hebrews, who believe that Alexander, was an arch-persecutor of their race, swarmed upon the steps outside and overflowed into a second hall. The police were kept busy much of the night keeping the street clear for travel. Women and children mingled in the crush of men.

A parody on the Russian hymn "God Save the Czar" was then recited and afterward sung.

Another parody in verse on the "Reception of the Soul of the Czar by the Superintendent of Sheol" seemed to meet the approbation of the listeners.

After the mock funeral those present attempted to dance, but so great was the crowd that there was little pleasure to be had in the waltz.

Hebrew newspapers printed in Hebrew type are not very interesting to one who does not understand and cannot speak the language, but just at this time they become intensely so when some of their articles are turned into English. Here are literal translations from the most prominent daily and weekly sheets, which show the feeling of the persecuted race against Alexander:

The Daily Jewish Herald says editorially:

"We are glad to announce that the tyrannic heart of Alexander III beats no more! Was it not a sight to make angels weep and despots tremble, that the Czar of all the Russias should be lying on his sick-bed imploring death; he, the persecutor of Jew and Gentile; he, the heartles prince whose cruel edicts have given so many to the whipping post, to Siberia for life, or to death.

Misplaced Sympathy.

If anything were necessary to show that there are more disordered brains in the world than is generally suspected the proof would be found in the sympathy that is openly expressed in some parts of Quebec for Chattelle, the worse than barbarous murderer of Lizzie Keith, of Listowel. Notwithstanding his confession of his guilt his friends, says the Quebec Chronicle,—who could be the friends of such a man?—"are subscribing it is said, to provide him with the best counsel that can be obtained. The doctors are called to investigate his mental condition, and it is suggested that as he is a dangerous lunatic, the ends of justice would be satisfied with his incarceration in an asylum. If it be true that the man is really insane, though we doubt it, and certainly he was in his right mind when he slew his victim, and confessed his crime, he is better out of the world than in it. Men of his stripe are of no use in the world, and the sooner they are out of it the better. If he is sent to an asylum, the first thing the country will hear, probably, is that he has killed his keeper, or committed some other atrocity." The Chronicle is right. If the man is insane no good purpose would be served by keeping him alive; if he is sane his life, in prison or out, would be a constant menace to society. Sympathy with such a criminal is nauseating, demoralizing. We warrant that few if any have volunteered financial assistance to the parents of the victim of this monster to secure for him the punishment which he so richly deserves. Sympathy with Chattalle means sympathy with the whole gang of ravishers, murderers, house breakers and incendiaries the ranks of which are growing to alarming proportions and it serves to encourage them in the perpetration of their dastardly crimes. Men and women who do this are their abettors, innocently it may be, but still their abettors.—St. John Gazette.

The Last Long Sleep.

Familiarity with death is apt to alter one's earlier conceptions of it. Two ideas are very generally accepted weich experience shows to be false. One is that the dying usually fear death, and the other, that the act of dying is accompanied by pain. It is well known to all physicians that when death is near its terrors do not seem to be felt by the patient. Unless the imagination is stimulated by the frightful portrayal of the supposed "pangs of death," or of the sufferings which some believe the soul must endure after dissolution, it is rare indeed that the last days or hours of life are passed in dread.

Oliver Wendall Holmes has recorded his protest against the custom of telling a person who does not actually ask to know that he cannot recover. As that loving observer of mankind asserts so must everyone who knows whereof he speaks assert that people almost always come to understand that recovery is impossible; it is rarely needful to tell anyone that this is the case. When nature gives the warning, death appears to be as little feared as sleep.

Most sick persons are very, very tired; sleep—long, quiet sleep—is what they want. I have seen many people die. I have never seen one who seemed to fear death, except when it was, or seemed to be, rather far away. Even those who are constantly haunted, while strong and well with a dread of the end of life, forget their fear when the end is at hand.—Scribner's Magazine.

Donahoe's Magazine for November.

Each number brighter and better than its predecessor is the verdict with which Donahoe's Magazine is popularly honored, and the justice of that verdict being emphasized by the November issue of this excellent publication. The current number is rich in beautifully illustrated papers, dealing with "Georgetown College Observatory," "Catholic Sons of Harvard," "Diocese of Albany," "Archbishop Ireland," and "A Colored Etching," the latter dealing with Catholic effort in St. Paul for the spiritual benefit of the negro. Rev. J. A. Zahm, C. S C, contributes a comprehensive paper on the recent "International Catholic Scientific Congress;" while there is also the usual rich store of prose and verse to make a notable issue of this enterprising publication. No wonder that Donahoe's Magazine has established itself as the leading Catholic periodical of America; its pages abundantly vindicate its right to that title, Donahoe's Magazine Co., 611 Washington street, Boston.
