APOCRYPHA.

Books Formerly Found in All Old Bibles.

In Harper's, James Thompson Bixby tells the story of the 14 books which in the days of our grandfathers appeared in the Bible between the old and new testaments.

The name Apochypha now attached to these 14 books means primarily 'The Hidden." Originally the word Apocryphal meant simply the books whose origin was obscure or whose us-age and meaning were secret. Neither among Hebrew scholars nor in the early Christian church did the word imply that these books were either untrust worthy, spurious, or unworthy of relig worthy, spurious, or unwormy of reing-tious use and reverence. They have been printed, therefore, as part of the Holy Scripture in the Septuegint. the Vul-gate and most Roman Catholic Bibles up to the present time. In the Lutheran, Reformed and English Bibles for nearly Reformed and English Bibles for nearly three centuries after Luther's break with Rome they were printed, and they have been read in Protestant pulpits during the same period as useful and good for edification, although not authoritative in proof of Christian doctrine. The homilies of the Anglican Church are still full of citations from the Aposrypha on an equal level with the canonical Old Testament.

It was not till the year 1826 that the British and American Bible societies banished them as uninspired from the company of the other biblical writings with which for 18 centuries they have been contributing to the moral instruc-tion and spiritual nurture of Christen

Have these ancient books between the testaments deserved this sentence of banishment from Christian knowledge and service? The customary reason has been that they were "uncannonical." Many Christian scholars, however, doubt both the wisdom and the justice of this sentence. For with the rise of modern biblical criticism the reasons on which theologians had learned, such as that they were written in Greek, not in holy Hebrew, that ancient rabbis and scholars like Jerome, had bis and scholars like Jerome, had doubted his canopicity, and Protestant councils questioned their inspiration, have one by one lost their former force. Modern scholars think that the Divine Spirit was quite as likely to dictate religious revelation in Greek as in Hebrew, and that, in respect to scholarly knowledge and judgment of what is spiritual truth, modern critics and theologians are as competent to and theologians are as competent to judge as ancient rabbis or the doctor of divinity of one or two hundred years

FASHION HAS A MORAL SIDE. (Detroit Freee Press)

(Detroit Freee Press)

Mr. Basil King, of Cambridge, Mass., makes a contribution to the current discussion of prevailing feminine fashions by remarking that the modes of the day savor of the madhouse and that a woman's clothing must more of less influence her spiritual nature for good or for evil accordingly as it appeals to the finer or to the gresses senses.

The sanitary issue can take care of itself. Anyone with even limited powers of observation can form a fairly correct opinion as to the justness or the unjustness of Mr. King's censure of styles on this point. And the observation need many samples of evidence be examined.

As to the spiritual influence point there may wee be some careful thinking. For if styles are to injuriously, affect the natures of budding women they become matter of racial and moral concern. But it is questionable whether much thinking and conversational denunciation will be affective to alter the situation. If it is to be altered it must be altered by women themselves. And if they are to continue to be the lure to higher and better endeavor on the part of men they will not be remiss in rectifying the obligations of fashion—surely not.

NEWEST CORSETS

Come High, But Are a Vast Improvement.

Corsets have undergone an entire transformation, not only in shape but in materials, in the last few years. No longer does a woman have to buy one of a few styles and try to fit her fig ure to the corset. She now may choose from as many styles as if sh were selecting a dress, and for her particular type of figure she can by a little looking about find exactly what she needs, even in details that will correct faults of proportion

Whether a corset is long above the waist or not depends very much on the figure. If the top edge cuts into the flesh it is a sign that it is not the right height, even though a brassiere be worn with it. On the other hand some so long as to be skirtlike. Of course the inset supports of whalebone or other sustaining fabrication do not descend much below the hips, but they are not needed below, the material holding the surplus flesh firmly in

To-day a stout woman need not be imprisoned in heavy coutil, as the strong open mesh tricot weave may be used and is much more hygienic than closely woven material. Besides most of it launders, and a corset can be kept in good condition.

There are those, however, who like the prettiness of the pale pink and blue batiste corsets or the white ones embroidered with a little colored flower or fleur de lis. In these corsets, to get elasticity in certain parts, matching silk elastic webbing is inserted to give ease to the wearer, and sometimes a band is placed inside in front to give extra support to the ab

The brassieres are made to match the corsets or of eyelet worked linen and have seams stayed by tubular bias bands into which little supports may he inserted, removable for Those to wear with a low neckgown are on quite different lines from those for daytime wear, in some cas being attached to the corset top and not over the shoulders.

It goes without saying that these corsets cost more than the ordinary ready made kind, but, fitting the fig-ure, they last much longer, and therefore are not more expensive in the end. The expense is more in the time taken to find the right corset for the figure, as a number of shops must be visited in order to make comparisons. It is necessary also to get used to the new silhouette with the undefined waist line and the symmetrical but un-accentuated curve that gives the fasrionable fivure of to-day. The lat est corset designs shows a slight variation from the straight front pinched in a little below the bust, curving outward slightly below.

THE FALLING BIRTHRATE.

(Philadelphia Record)

(Philadeiphia Record)
The birthrate declines most rapidly among the well-to-do. This appears not only from the comparison of the rural and urban birthrate in Germany, but also from other available statistical information. Among English titled families, who patents of nobility date back 200 years or more, seven was the average in the decade ended 180; in the decade ended in 1900 the number was three. The "confidential" census made by 81d ney Webb, the eminent English sociologist, among 120 "intellectuals" indicates that the average number of children per marriage was less than two. In an English beneficial society, whose membership includes nearly 300,000 workingmen, and which advances thirty shillings as a lying-in benefit to each member's wife in the event of confinement, the claims diminished from 247 per thousand in 1880 to 117 per thousand in 1880 to 117 per thousand in 180 to 117 per thousand in 180 to 117 per thousand in 180 to 117 per thousand in percent years. This indicates a decline of more than 50 per cent. in the birthrate within a period of thirty years among the more provident workingmen's families of England.

make reunion and renewed affection out of them.

Whatever the result of this particular case, a large and tolerant wisdom looks from the decree. Too many divorces are as hasty, as too many marriages, and especially where one or both parties are young, high strung, romantic, full of the intolerance of youth and stung by the realism of a seeming disillusion and disappointment.

It is not so unlikely as most other things in this world of marvels which has so common a face that if many married folks were separated by the law for periods of weeks, months or years, according to the stage of the patients, they would confirm the old proverb and give the courts a mighty sight less to do.

The sensational, muck-raking minister who delivers his essays on vice before mixed audiences of young and old, is subject to the same chiticisms to which the writers of sensational sex stories and the puveyors or risque plays are subject, only in great degree. The clergymen who habitually indulges in such sermonizing is more of a menace than a good, and has forgotten that it is his mission to call sinners to repentance, rather than to hold up for the horror of the elet and the injury of innocent childhood, the hideoug tental of the sins of the ungodly.

No one but a blind pessimist can fail to see that in every department of life three has been progress. We need only to go back a few centuries when war meant slaughter and ratine to the non combatant as well as to the soldier; when in the highest society there was the lowest standard of purity; when religiouss seats thought more ow their dogmas than of Christianity; when politics was a game of corruption, in which every man had his price; when the masses were degraded and rich. How can a thoughtful man compare the past with the present and not realize that everywhere there has been improvement? That there is evil in the world to-day it not questioned. (Philadelphia Record) Higher education certainly comes in America. Harvard University hast year had an income of over $2,550,000, of which only some $670,000 came from the tuition of students, but despite this pincely revenue, greater than that of ly revenue, greater than that of some States, it had a dericit of over $10,000. This disparity between the total income and amount paid by the students, little more than quarter, shows to low great an extent our leading educational institutions must depend upon the returns from their investments and the gifts of friends to meet current expenses. Probably Harvard which has investments totaling nearly $5,000,000. Is rather an extreme example of this kind. No university or college, however, which possesses any 'standing,' could exist for a year if entirely dependent upon its income from its students.
