Didn't Seem to Worry

Him In the Least

A talkative and self important young court stenographer went with a detailed judge to one of the feud towns in the Kentucky mountains to do his part in holding a term of court.

It was a small place, far from a railroad, and the inhabitants were all feudists of one clan or another. After a day or two at the little hotel the stenographer said to the hotel keeper, "Where's the barber shop?"

"Ain't no barber shop here," the boniface replied. "We all mostly lets our hair grow."

"But can't I get shaved anywhere?" "Oh, yes, I reckon you kin. Uncle Joe down to the cobbler's shop sometimes shaves folks."

The stenographer went to Uncle Joe's and found the cobbler to be a mild mannered old man with flowing gray whiskers and a pale and beatific blue eye.

Uncle Joe said he could shave him, and he got out a razor and a shaving mug. The stenographer sat down on a chair and leaned back. He waited in some trepidation, but the man was skillful and gave him a good shave.

It was necessary for the young man to talk, so when the barber was on his throat he said, "Good many murders around here, ain't there?"

"Well, sub," the barber said, "we don't call them murders. Howsom-ever, there is some killin's, if that is what you mean."

"Oh, well," said the young man, "I suppose one name's as good as another. When was the last killing?"

"A man was shot out here in the square last week."

The barber brought the razor up on the young man's Adam apple. "I did," he said.—Saturday Evening Post.

They Missed the Treasure.
Burly Tom, the train robber, with his band of trusties behind him, plunged down over the locomotive tank in the black of the night, thrust his horse pistols into the face of the engineer of the midnight express and compelled that individual to bring his train to a halt.

"Now," said Tom after the train had stopped, "you kin cut off dat car load of wid ice an' pull it down de track a piece, where me an' me pals will unload it."

At these words the face of the engineer brightened.

"Aha, you are mistaken!" he exclaimed joyously. "The ice train was sent along in the daylight under heavy guard. There is nothing on this train but packages of money."

Seeing that the treasure he was lying in wait for had slipped through his fingers, the robber turned pale with anger. The air turned a robin's egg blue with his curses as he and his companions leaped from the locomotive.—Judge.

Triumph of Art.
Miss Peachley (exhibiting her new hat)—I know you won't like it. Miss Tartan—But I do, dear. I never saw anything more artistic than that arrangement of the flowers. It hides the shape of it beautifully.

The Gentle Kidney Cure.
Don't think that Bu-Ju is not effective because it does not "tear things loose." The man who talks must, does least. Kidney remedies that purge and over-stimulate the kidneys—upset the stomach—are good to do you mighty little good.

Bu-Ju

goes about curing you gently, mildly, correctly. You never know you are taking medicine—except that you begin to get better and keep on getting better. Bu-Ju has inflammation in the kidneys—takes away that sharp pain in the back and the dull ache through the hips—stops excessive urination—and enables the diseased portions of the kidneys to heal and strengthen.

Willie's Reasoning.
Willie—Papa, if I were "wonder" would you buy the other boy a banana too?
Papa—Certainly, my son.
Willie—Well, papa, you surely ain't going to cheat me out of another banana just 'cause I'm all in one piece?—Judge.

A Pipe Dream.
I was smoking and dreaming, my darling, Alone by my fire today When, through the soft smoke clouds I saw you Smiling at me, far away.

You were smiling so sweetly, my loved one, As I gazed in your dear eyes of blue It seemed that you surely could see me, And I blew a kiss over to you.

Along with the kiss went a smoke ring, And nearer and nearer it rolled, Till at last it slipped over your finger And turned to a circle of gold.

Medical.

A young doctor said to a girl: "Do you know, my dear, I have a heart affection for you?"

"Have you had it long?" she coyly required.
"Oh, yes, I feel I will live troubled life without you," he responded.

"Then you had better asthma," she softly murmured.

NO MAN IS STRONGER THAN HIS STOMACH.

Let the greatest athlete have dyspepsia and his muscles would soon fail. Physical strength is derived from food. If a man has indigestion, his strength is lost. He has no food he dies. Food is converted into nutrition through the stomach and bowels. It depends on the strength of the stomach to digest and assimilate. People can die of starvation who have abundant food to eat, when the stomach and its associated organs of digestion and nutrition do not perform their duty.

Thus the stomach is really the vital organ of the body. If the stomach is "weak" the body will be weak also, because it is upon the stomach the body relies for its strength. And as the body, considered as a whole, is made up of its several members and organs, so the weakness of the body as a consequence of "weak" stomach will be distributed among the organs which compose the body. If the body is weak because it is ill-nourished that physical weakness will be found in all the organs—heart, liver, kidneys, etc.

The liver will be torpid and inactive, giving rise to biliousness, loss of appetite, nervous, feeble or irregular action of the heart, palpitation, dizziness, headache, backache and kindred disturbances and weaknesses.

Mr. Louis Pare, of Quebec, writes: "For years after my health began to fail, my head grew dizzy, eyes pained me, and my stomach was sore all the time. While everything I would eat would seem to lie heavy like lead on my stomach. The doctors called it was a sympathetic trouble due to dyspepsia, and prescribed for me, and although I took their powders regularly yet I got no better. My wife advised me to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery—and stop taking the doctors' medicine. She bought me a bottle and I soon found that I began to improve, so I kept up the treatment. I took on flesh, my work became normal, the digestive organs worked perfectly and I soon began to look like a different person. I can never cease to be grateful for what your medicine has done for me and I certainly give it highest praise."

Don't be misled by a penny-grabbing dealer into taking inferior substitutes for Dr. Pierce's medicines, recommended to be "just as good."

To gain knowledge of your own body—in sickness and health—send for the People's Common Sense Medical Adviser. A book of 1008 pages. Send $1 one-cent stamps for paper-covered, or 50 stamps for cloth-bound copy. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

A Wise Father.
When Sherman Hoar, a lawyer of recognized ability, left the law school and opened an office in Boston, his father, Judge Hoar, was at the height of his legal reputation. The young man's first client was an Irishman, and the case, though only some small matter of a boundary line, was one that required the examination of a number of deeds and records. Mr. Hoar accordingly told his client to come back in two days for his opinion. The Irishman left the office, evidently very reluctant at the delay. Turning at the door, he asked, "Couldn't ye give me the answer tomorrow, Misther Hoar?"

"No, no," was the reply; "come on Thursday."

The client went as far as the stairs. Then he turned and tiptoed back to the door and put his head inside, with a finger at his lips.

"Whist!" he whispered. "Couldn't ye get to see your father tonight, Misther Hoar?"

Can Animals Blush?
It is hard to tell whether animals blush, for their faces are covered so thickly with fur or hair or feathers that we do not know what may be going on beneath. Were they as bare-faced as man it is more than likely we should see them blush, especially the more bashful sort and those with some sense of shame. It is a fact that the faces of vultures become purple with rage, which may be considered as a kind of blushing. This may be proved any day in the monkey house in the London zoological gardens, where the baboons seem to fly into a passion on the slightest provocation.—London Mail.

For a Chance.
"You don't mean to tell me that you have named your baby 'Ananas'?" "Yessuh," answered Uncle Ben.

"Dat's his name."

"But Ananas was the most untruthful man in history."

"Dat's de reason. We's gwinter put dat boy in politics. We's been namin' children 'George Washington' foh years an' it didn't do good. Now we's gwinter try de other feller."

Origin of Alcohol.
A scientist says that when people were cave dwellers their diet consisted entirely of roots and fruits and that it was not unnatural to suppose that the food was often stored away. In course of time the fruit fermented, the sugar in it was turned into pure alcohol and the cave dwellers drank it and got to like it. This was the beginning of the use of alcohol.

It sometimes happens that an exploded theory doesn't even wake up the theorist.
