* * * * Since my arrival here I have visited nearly all the newspaper offices, and it surprised me greatly to see the modus operandi of them. Presses going almost like lightning, of their own accord, there being no one needed to attend or feed them. And the thought occurred to me just then, when I needs of the metal had hitherto excluded it from the part it is destined to play

ITS USES.

Every day the uses of antimony are extending, and in the construction of rubber hose its product will be of immense value. The comparative scarceness of the metal had hitherto excluded it from the part it is destined to play the thought occurred to me just then, when I saw over fifty females, ranging in age from ten to sixty, rushing into the offices of the evening papers, with their handful of pennies to pay for their bundle, that, if they made such an uproar in our Star office (Fton) as they do in the Evening Telegram office, the whole force, from Demon to Editor, would feel disposed to lower them down stairs. Still, this is the way a great many women eke out an existence, and the American people seem to encourage rather than censure it. I was much astonished also, when I saw on the news stands Hebrew, German, Italian and French papers, all of which are printed and supported in this city. There are three or four different German papers alone printed here; and there are more sold on the streets than of any English paper. I send you a few of those, hoping they will prove—not interesting but just curious to you. As you will see, we have several German theatres here also, which run all the year round."

COMPANY.

Possessing the finest antimony mine ever yet discovered in any part of the world, also controlling the most valuabre and comprehensive series of patents ever secured in the manufacture of rubber, the future of the Brunswick Antimony Company seems fully assured. The question of safe and judicious management seems to be the only additional factor of success, and of this the past is a safe guarantee of the future. Antimony products, suitable future.
