Dr. Quigley's great lecture on Cardinal Newman, postponed from April 18th, will take place in the Lyceum Hall, on Thursday evening May 16th. The fascinating interest attaching to the subject of the lecture is of itself sufficient to draw a crowded house. When to this is added the reputation and fame of the lecturer, no one can doubt that an intellectual treat of rare excellence is in store for all who attend at the Lyceum Hall on the 16th inst. Dr. Quigley never does anything by halves; but devotes to every subject he takes up the deepest study and the most thorough investigation. He has found this method of the great Oratorian Cardinal Newman, and has concentrated upon the study of this subject all the force of his logical and analytical mind. The result is a masterpiece of rare literary and oratorical excellence. So graphic is his word painting that the audience almost imagine they behold the subject of the lecture standing before them, and so persuasive is his eloquence that all are held captive from start to finish. This is the manner of lectures that is in store for all who go to the Lyceum on Thursday evening, May 16th. Be sure and make no other engagements for that date. It will be an event of which all will afterwards regret with delight. No one should miss this lecture.
