

LONDON, May 2. The long holiday for the politicians may be the King's working time. Both he and the Queen had paid income taxes at the full rate of 14 pence on the pound before the Finance bill was signed. This was the practise of Queen Victoria, and they have followed it, although the treasury has no power to levy on the Crown. The example set by them will be enforced by an army of tax collectors and the deficit in the treasury will disappear and the Budget issue with it from politics. The constitutional question will remain and the Crown will be drawn into politics, unless peace can be arranged between the Houses during the next month, and the Sovereign alone has the prestige and authority for attempting to do it. Both the Unionists and the moderate liberals would be glad to have him undertake this difficult task especially as their leaders are convinced that another general election will leave the relations of the parties virtually unchanged with 20 seats won or lost and John Redmond holding the balance of power. It is an easy inference that the King is not pleased with the situation which might have been averted if his warnings last autumn respecting the suspension of the budget had been heeded.

Cutting his way through a living mass of 20,000 cheering people, his white locks bared to the breeze and his feet keeping time to the strains of the Star Spangled Banner, Edward Payson Weston brought to a triumphant finish to-day his ocean to ocean walk. He ascended the steps of the City Hall at 3.10 p.m., completing the transcontinential journey of 3,483 miles in seventy seven walking days. a feat without parallel in the annals of pedestrianism. The grizzled athlete was welcomed to his home city by Mayor Gaynor, who presented him with a purse of $400 hurriedly raised ed by a handful of his admirers in the last hours of his wonderful walk, and the gold Championship Belt. Finest Collection
