

A Real Lung Tonic

There are many preparations that will relieve a cough—few that will cure it. The first class, containing such drugs as Opium and Morphine, simply deaden the irritation and stop the cough, but do little or no permanent good.

Rev. Father Morrissey

"Father Morrissey's No. 10"

does not contain a trace of these dangerous drugs, but is an absolutely safe and scientific preparation of Nature's own remedies—Herbs, Roots and Balsams.

It entirely removes the irritation that caused the cough, by cleaning out the mucus, stopping the inflammation and healing the delicate membrane of throat and lungs.

Moreover, it tones up and strengthens the whole system, particularly the lungs, and protects against future coughs and colds.

Tale of Mystery

CHAPTER IV.
A BRIBE.

But a moment's rapid consideration sufficed to let the girl's quick wit see that though there were reasons why she would be unwise to go to the police with her story, it was absolutely impossible for him to go. It was a piece of bluff in which she felt she would be quite safe in out-bidding him. She sat silent a moment as if considering the suggestion, and then rising, said deliberately:—

'That seems to be proof that would be conclusive; and, as you say, it can be obtained quite privately by us two alone. I will accept the offer. I will go and put on my hat, and will accompany you without loss of time. I quite see that it is unfair for me to leave this matter unproved a minute longer than necessary.'

'Certainly,' he assented, without changing a muscle of his face; and he held the door open for her as she left the room to get ready. She was as astonished and shaken by this; but she was not absent many minutes, and when she returned she found him ready with an excuse to flinch from the police.

'Something has occurred to me; and I fear it will be inexpedient for me to make the visit. A minute's reflection has caused me to take a much graver view of the matter. So much hangs upon the result to me that I cannot consent to keep it private merely to yourself and myself. Besides, when you come to think of it, it would be ridiculous to walk into Scotland Yard and say, "This young lady thinks I am a French murderer; please convince her I am nothing of the kind." They would laugh at us both and send us packing about our business to go and verify my identification in a proper way.'

'I knew you didn't mean to go, even when you proposed it,' said Dessie, curtly. 'But your reason is not what you say, and you know that perfectly well.'

Nerves at High Tension

Slight extra strain means collapse—Restoration obtained by using DR. A.W. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD

The successful men and women are often of the high-strung nervous type—keen and active—but with too little reserve force.

A little extra worry and anxiety and snap goes the nervous system. Weeks and months are often required before energy and vigor are regained.

Rest helps, so does fresh air and exercise, but the blood must also be made rich and red by use of Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food.

Mr. Wm. Branton, Victoria St., Stratford, Ont., writes:—My nervous system seemed all unstrung. I could not sleep, had no appetite, my digestion was poor and I had jerking of the limbs. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food helped me and I continued until I had taken twenty-four boxes. This treatment has made a radical change in my condition, building up the system and strengthening the nerves. 'You make full use of your woman's privilege to say things a man dare not say,' said her antagonist, angry because of the defeat. 'I trust you will be as generous with your apologies when you know the truth as you have been with your sneers now.'

'I know the truth already,' retorted Dessie, sharply.

'I have engagements, but I am returning to this house again this afternoon. I am dining here again with Mrs. Markham. I shall then tell her what you have said, unless, indeed—this will be the best course—you tell me how this strange idea originated. I can then, perhaps, dust away the whole cobweb.'

'The knowledge is based on my own recognition of you. I myself know you to be the man I say.'

'It is quite enough for me,' returned

HA! HA! He! He!

That's the way to feel—EVERY ONE does that takes a CASCARET night BEFORE when he looks at the fellow who didn't. For OVER-EATING and DRINKING nothing on Earth cleans you out as a CASCARET, naturally—easily, without that upset sick feeling. Don't neglect—at bed time—9 P. M. or 4 A. ed Dessie, curtly. 'The proofs will be easily forthcoming. I can put my hand on them.'

'You are a difficult young woman to deal with; but I think I can see your motive, clever as it is. You wish to set Mrs. Markham against me. You are afraid that you will lose that control her money which your present influence gives you. You start this cock-and-bull story about my being some French criminal in disguise—not because you believe it yourself and think there is the remotest atom of truth in the accusation, but for a very astute reason nevertheless. You calculate that it will induce your friend and patron to institute some kind of exhaustive investigation into my character, and you reckon that in such a case there may be discovered some one incident or other which you can twist and distort and magnify until in your clever white hands it will be enough to separate us and allow you to keep your rich friend's riches for yourself.' He paused, screwed up his eyes, and looked at the girl through the little slits.

'Well?' said Dessie, in a plain matter of fact tone.

'You are judging others—me, that is—by your own standard.' Dessie could not wholly restrain a slight start at this unexpected thrust. 'You have secrets in your life that you don't wish exposed to every prying eye—not even your lover's eye. You reckon that if that be so with a young girl beginning life like you, it is much more likely to be the case with a man half through with it, like me. Well, it so happens, you are almost wholly wrong. With ninety-nine men out of every hundred the searchlight, if powerful enough, would probably find an ugly spot somewhere capable of a very sinister interpretation. But I don't believe even your pretty ingenuity could do much harm with the facts you would find in my life. Certainly not of recent years. But like most men—here the intensity of his vigilant watch of her face seemed to increase—'I don't want such an inquiry, either for my sake or that of others. It would do no good to anyone—though it could do no harm to me.'

'Well?' said Dessie, again, as he paused.

'You could do no good for yourself by it, Miss Merriam. You would not win in the end. You would not find sufficient to part Dora and me. I love her. She loves me. We conjugate every tense of every mood of the verb to love. More, she trusts me as I trust her. There is not an incident in all my life about which a word of explanation from me would not suffice to satisfy her. My heart tells me that. Therefore, you are bound to lose—lose her friendship, her patronage, her help, her money, everything. You must see that. You could not be the friend of a man and wife whom you had tried malignantly to part.'

'I see that,' said Dessie, when he paused again.

'Then let us three be good, firm friends, as Dora herself would wish. It will be better worth your while to do that, don't you think? I will see that it is so, indeed.'

'Worth my while? How do you mean?'

'I am frankness itself, and we are alone together. I do not wish to have these doubts poured into the ears of the woman I love and am to marry. For the sake of others, I would rather have no such inquiry. If, therefore, you agree to see this as I do, then, whatever you wish in reason, shall be done—after we are married.'

A craftily-worded bribe, but the girl intended to make him speak more plainly. She knitted her brows as if in thought, and then, after a pause, acting diffidence, she said slowly and hesitatingly:

'How am I to know that what would really do it? I do not wish to make mischief unintentionally.'

'You can name any sum that you would like to give to a charity up to five thousand pounds; and you shall have it.'

There was no mistake now; and Dessie's honest heart beat with anger and her cheeks flushed with shame as she bent her head down to hide her face from him.

In the pause that followed, while the girl was fighting for sufficient composure to find some sort of reply, the door was opened quickly and Mrs. Markham came bursting in upon them.

'I thought I'd give you a surprise,' she cried, laughing. 'You have been quite long enough together, too, I think, to get to know one another better. And I shall be jealous of you, Dessie, if you monopolize Godefrid longer. I hope you are getting on well?' And she looked a little doubtfully into Dessie's flushed face, which bore unmistakable evidence of the girl's agitation.

'Miss Merriam and I have had a most interesting chat,' said the Count, taking Dora's hands and kissing them both. And we are getting to understand one another most completely. I am beginning to admire Miss Merriam's cleverness almost as much as you, my Dora; and I believe we shall be the closest of friends. But you are looking radiant, Dora; and I was afraid you were suffering and ill. Even illness cannot dim your eyes or pale your cheeks, or hide your beauty.'

As Dessie watched her friend's face, she saw the cheeks colour with pleasure at this most fulsome compliment. She longed to speak out and tell all she knew, but feared to force a crisis at that instant and without further reflection as to her best line of action.

When she was silent, she caught the man's dark eyes fixed upon her with an expression of triumph.

Indigestion & Dyspepsia

In all its Forms can be Cured.

It is quite a daily occurrence to hear persons say: 'Oh, what a feeling of distress I have after meals, fullness of the stomach, heaviness and headache, I feel too tired to do anything I have no heart to exert myself and at times I care for nothing. I often have a pain in the pit of my stomach, no appetite, my heart beats rapidly on the slightest exertion. I feel just as tired when rising in the morning as when retiring to bed. My sleep is often disturbed, and I often awake with a sense of suffocation and a difficulty of getting going to sleep. I have to be careful of what I eat, and my life seems a veritable burden. Now, it seems a shame and a pity for persons to be suffering like this when it is so easy to get cured by taking a Bottle of Dr. Stafford's Prescription. A sure cure for persons afflicted with stomach troubles. It can be obtained of—

Experiment on Living Fish.

There appears to be no limit to scientific curiosity, especially in Germany. Not long ago a scientist of Leipzig, wishing to ascertain whether fish are warmer than the water they live in, stuck a needle, connected with a thermoelectric circuit, into a living fish in an aquarium. The needle formed one element of the circuit, while the other element was immersed in the same water that contained the fish. The latter was not seriously injured by the needle, and quickly became indifferent to it.

Then, as the fish swam about, carrying the needle, the ingenious savant closed the circuit and kept watch of the galvanometer. It showed no deflection whatever; from which he concluded that the fish and the water were precisely equal in temperature, for had either been warmer than the other, a current would have been generated in the circuit.

Stabbed to Death.

PARIS, Sunday, April 2. An excited man-hunt took place today in the Latin Quarter. Screams were heard coming from a room in an apartment house, and neighbors who broke in, found a young girl stabbed to the heart. A barber named Bachelier, who had killed the girl in a fit of jealousy, took to his heels down the stairs into the street.

He was followed by a yelling crowd and took refuge in a church, where he barricaded himself. The crowd tore down all the barricades, but the murderer escaped from the church. He had not gone far when he was seized by two policemen.

Plucking a knife from his girdle, Bachelier struck down both his captors, one of the policemen receiving a wound in the hand. Before the murderer could make off again, the crowd was upon him and belaboured him with great violence. Had the police not interfered the man would have been lynched.
