Marian Rents a Room

Marian spent the next day, room hunting. She fitted from furnished room to furnished room like a million restless, shifting, homeless room hunters had done before her in the red-brick district of New York's West Side.

She rang a score of doorbells and looked into endless coops of rooms. For the most part they were cheerless retreats. At last she found one which she thought would do, a second floor cubby hole at three dollars a week, which blinked with the eye of a single window into a dark courtyard. It contained a water-streaked pine washstand, an enameled bedstead, a feeble rocking chair, and a creaking cane-bottomed chair. The bedstead was the room's one best boast of freshness and cheerfulness. Denim curtains at the window conspired with the court beyond to limit the influx of air.

Marian took it out of sheer weariness of the quest and paid a week's rent in advance. She was glad that the place was not a boarding house, and that she would not be compelled to take her meals there. She much preferred restaurants. She promised herself that the moment she could secure work she would move into more inviting quarters. She consoled herself that her new room was in the heart of the "theatrical district. She hoped vaguely that this environment would be productive of an engagement.

Hurrying back to her hotel, a palace by comparison, she packed her things, ordered her trunk sent to her new abode, and settled with the cashier for her day at the hotel.

"Leaving us so soon?" said the cashier, a young woman with red hair and dreamy hazel eyes, as she accepted Marian's payment and began to stamp her statement in receipt. The telephone of her desk jingled and she paused to answer it.

"Hello," she sang. "Sure I know your voice. . . . Forget it. . . . Don't you ever think it, you handsome thing. . . . Do you, honest? No, I ain't off till 11 to-night. . . . Awful, isn't it? . . . Quit your kidding! . . . All right, I'll meet you at 11. . . . Same place? All right. Ta-ta."

Marian would have welcomed tears, destination. She began hanging her things on hooks in the musty closet. A dreary mood descended upon her. She seemed to behold the grim procession of life's failures who had lived in that room before she came along.

She would have welcomed tears. They would have relieved the dispirited tension of her feelings. But none came. She sat down in the groaning rocker and swayed back and forth until the protesting joints of the chair began rendering her nerves.

"So this is what I've come to," she cried bitterly, rising. "Of all impossible holes, this is the limit. If I don't get out of here I'll go mad!" (To-morrow—The Sign of the Spavined Pig.)

got within sight of Springfield on the Sangamon and helped pull the state capitol up by the roots from Vandalia and bring it home when he was a mere boy in the legislature. More people come to Springfield to look at Lincoln's tomb than go to Stratford to read Shakespeare's epitaph.

Springfield has fine old residence streets of great beauty, and is also a bustling modern city. The longest interurban system in the world radiates from Springfield, and the only interurban sleeping cars in captivity pass through the city nightly. Springfield also has a real poet, Nicholas Vachel Lindsay, a United States senator and a Democratic newspaper which has the nerve to oppose Roger Sullivan.

Springfield also sent Larry Doyle to the New York Giants. For this reason it is one of the few cities in the world in which New York traveling men and actors are humble and willing to learn.

Dear Sir,—I have analyzed a sample of Sulphate of Ammonia made at your Works and I found 20.5 per cent of NITROGEN, Sulphates of Ammonia and Nitrate of Soda are the two principal Nitrogen manures.

Sulphate of Ammonia is less soluble than Nitrate of Soda, consequently it is a safer manure to use during a wet season.

Will Investigate Killing of Explorers.

OTTAWA, June 23.—Inspector W. J. Bates of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police, who is to head the police party going north to investigate the killing of the explorers, Radford and Street, was in Ottawa today conferring with Controller Fortescue. Inspector Bates is one of the most experienced officers of the Mounted Police and is thoroughly familiar with the Far North country, including the deadly Dawson trail between Dawson and Fort McPherson.

He goes from Ottawa to Halifax where he will take ship for Hudson Bay, landing probably in the vicinity of Chesterfield Inlet. The party will likely cross country from there to the country south of Bathurst Inlet, where Radford and Street met their death.

Where Responsibility Lies.

No matter how large, or how small, a business may be, nobody can deny that its office is the nerve centre of the firm. Every transaction, important or trivial, must be recorded at the Office. An order is received at the Office, its history is recorded at the Office, and finally payment is received at the Office. If the Office makes an error the firm stands the loss. That's why you must be sure that your office is modern and adequately equipped for the care of all important papers. To do this effectively you need the up-to-date equipment of the "GLOBE-WERNICKE CO." When sixty offices in St. John's have found this necessity this equipment can surely be of use to you. Mr. Percie Johnson represents this world known firm in Newfoundland. ap17.13

Contrariness.

The kinds of things I like to eat are those on which Doc puts a ban; I'm suffering from a juicy meat, and I must eat a tub of bran. I wonder why the things we hate are always good for our disease? I eat a about a hundredweight of cabbage when I'm wild for cheese. I cast a hungry, wistful eye upon the cherries, freshly canned, upon the doughnuts and the pie, but Doc, he shakes a warning hand. "If you," he says, "do not behave and eat this sawdust johnnie-cake, you'll soon go shopping for a grave and monument, and no mistake." I'd rather die than tramp a block; such exercise my bosom riles; the Doc he tells me I must walk each morning forty-seven miles. I like so well to lie in bed all morning, and to sweetly snore; but just to-day the old Doc said: "You'll have to rise at half past four!" The Doc, he seems to snoop around, discerning things that I despise, and then he says that I am bound to do those things, confound his eyes. And so I'm eating boiled meal, washed down with water from the pump; and if you ask me how I feel, my answers sure to make you jump.

Player Injured.

During last night's football match, Hanger, of the Casuats, collided with an opponent, and in falling injured his shoulder and wrist. First aid was rendered by Mr. W. Reeves after which he was taken from the field, and brought to his home. It is unlikely that he will be able to play any more during the season.
