Deadlock Continues

Business of the Legislature at a Standstill—Firm Stand of Opposition.

For the fourth consecutive day, with the Estimates of the Civil Service under discussion, not a solitary bit of business has been done at the House of Assembly, the Opposition members occupying the floor during all yesterday afternoon's sitting and talking for fully three hours and a half.

The Colonial Secretary tabled the report of the Commission appointed two years ago to investigate the alleged public scandal going on in the Postal Telegraph Department.

Mr. Winsor continuing from the previous day dealt with the increased salaries of civil servants, disagreeing with the principles adopted by the Government. He criticized the disparity in the stipends of Postal officials and showed where some were overpaid and others underpaid. He advised the Government to take a leaf out of the Postmaster General's book with a view to getting a better system.

Mr. Jennings was the next speaker, calling attention to the distorted reports of his speech that appeared in the Daily News and Evening Herald yesterday. He considered the reports unfair and deliberate and tended to injure him. He wished the members opposite to understand, especially the member for Burin, that he was not tied to the apron strings of anybody inside or outside the House. Whenever he spoke and whatever he spoke on were entirely his own independent views and were not made by arrangement with his Leaders. He hoped the member for Burin, who edits the News, would correct the statement.

Mr. Stone followed, deploring the fact that there was no provision in the Estimates for a General Election. Every electoral district in the country, he said, wanted an election this coming fall.

Mr. Higgins—"Mine doesn't."

Mr. Stone replied by stating the Government members were bound hand and foot under the party whip; denounced the papers of St. John's for saying an election was undesirable, adding that these papers were all paid for by the Government at the expense of the taxpayers of the country. He then attacked the business people of Water Street, designated them "unscrupulous grafters" and as a finale paid a glowing tribute to Mr. Coaker to whom, he said, the entire credit was due for putting so much money into the pockets of the sealers.

Mr. Coaker then stood up and for two solid hours spoke on a variety of matters. He first thought that an apology was due Mr. Jennings from the Editor of the News. He thought it a shame that 70 cents per day difference had not been paid the Naval Reservists ere this and then went on to tell how the northern people were flocking to him and singing out for an election. Here he remarked "The Premier is laughing."

The Premier: "It would make a cat laugh."

Mr. Coaker asked the Premier if it was his intention to stigmatize the fishermen of the country, and if it was he would be making the biggest mistake of his life.

The Premier said he would find that out as he did four years ago. Some more cross-firing ensued and resulted in Mr. Coaker accepting the Premier's excuse that he was not laughing at him or his speech.

Mr. Coaker resumed his remarks by citing a number of cases where money had been given by the Government to outport people for their votes and contrasted this exposure with the announcement that he intended to stand for Harbor Grace at the next election; and while talking on graft said that the British Government had made thirteen million dollars on one four transaction this year. He referred to the non-fulfillment of the promise to build the 17 sanitariums by the Reid and spoke of the Duke of Connaught's visit here and the ceremony that took place in connection therewith. He next criticized the Daily Star for publishing an editorial and alarming the people by the statement that the country was on the threshold of a food famine, and the Evening Herald for frightening the people by writing a story about our Regiment being "wiped out" and wondered why the strict censorship was not applied to these papers as it was to his, when it was prevented from entering the mails because it contained an item about the sailing of a vessel. Incidentally he complimented the Editor of the Herald on his efforts in connection with the war work here, though he scored the Star for advising the people to put in an extra quantity of foodstuffs. If such advice had been acted upon, he said, flour would today be $20.00 a barrel. The fisheries and the increases of salaries for civil servants and the poor mail service on the Labrador coast were also dealt with.

Mr. Piccott said that the Labrador mail service could not be better attended to under the circumstances.

It was then 6.45 p.m. and the House adjourned till this afternoon when the Estimates will again come up for discussion.

HOW TO RELAX FOR BEAUTY.

Lie flat on the floor with a folded blanket under you. Relax every muscle in the body and lie perfectly still for a few seconds. Raise first one leg and let it drop as though you had no power over it, and then do the same with the other.

Rest a moment, putting your muscles in a state of tension again. Then do the same exercise with the arms. Rest again with tension and then stand on your feet and hands and kick out backwards, first with one foot and then with the other. Do this about a dozen times. Then walk around the room on your hands and feet.

When you have completed the circuit of the room, stand erect, throw your shoulders back, and start the blood racing through the upper part of your body, by thrusting your arms first up, then sideways and then down, repeating this exercise with vigor and energy until the muscles are tired.

This exercise should leave your cheeks rosy with color and your eyes shining. If you find, however, that your lips do not look quite as fresh and soft and pink as you would like to have them, a dainty way of making them as sweet as a baby's is to bathe them in milk and rose leaves. This is a famous recipe which has been handed down for generations among the feminine members of the French nobility.

Fads and Fashions.

New coats are without wide collars and cuffs and many of them have no buttons.

White cotton fringe will make a pretty finish for the girdle of the bathing suit.

Pale gray handkerchiefs and linen dresses are really cool looking for a summer day.

Bridemaids will carry novel bouquets in the shape of muffs made of fresh flowers.

Ribbons and bows accompany lace in making the new summer frock a frilly affair.

Sweaters can easily be mistaken for blouses this season, so graceful and pretty are they.

Gray in all tones is used over deep rose or cream color—the gray usually being chiffon.

The sleeve that is tight-fitting from the wrist to the puff that springs out at the top is really fashionable.

Panel skirts have the panels cut on the straight of the goods, then gathered inside the belt and allowed to hang loose over it.

Lack of Ships to Convey U.S. Army Overseas.

9,250,000 Men Have Registered—Number Greatly Under Estimate—Census Over-Optimistic.

Washington, June 12.—Shortage of ships for military transport service constitutes one of the biggest problems before America's war chiefs today. That the despatch of the bulk of the new army may have to be delayed by reason of this lack of transports is admitted by the men in charge.

There are sufficient ships to carry vast numbers of soldiers, but this is only a small part of the problem, inasmuch as these men must be constantly supplied with food, clothing, artillery and other equipment.

This in itself is a tremendous task. The army will require its own weight in food every thirty-nine days, while all artillery must be renewed about every thirty days. Other supplies must be kept going in a constant stream.

In addition to these needs there is a question of supplies to the Allies.

Government Perplexed.

With these two needs—commercial and military—the government is sorely perplexed about meeting the problem. Next year will see a new flotilla of cargo carriers, but the big needs will come in the next few months.

Lord Northcliffe, in America to co-ordinate the work of British Missions, is counted on to make some vital suggestions in the line of obtaining enough shipping for all needs.

As army plans now stand, they contemplate the despatch of units abroad more or less constantly and in comparatively small numbers.

Soldiers already partly trained will get the finishing touches in France. The fact of sending these skilled men ahead will necessarily delay somewhat the despatch of a training force, will delay the moulding of the recruits.

9,250,000 Registered.

The total registration for selective service will be approximately 9,250,000, according to the revised figures given out to-day by the Provost-Marshal, Gen. Crowder. This number is more than 1,000,000 below the original census estimate.

Revision of the figures was made when the Provost-Marshal General's office realized that in using census figures officials did not take into account the fact that about 600,000 men of eligible age already have volunteered for service in the regular army—National Guard, Navy and Marine Corps.

Another factor in the revision was the belated realization that census bureau estimates—made previous to the war—did not take into account the fact that in the past three years immigration has practically stopped.

While officials realize that there are still probably many thousands of slackers, they point out to-day, following the revision of estimates, that the number will be far less than at first expected.

The War Department indulges in no figures or dates, inasmuch as such information is of value to the enemy, but in general it can be said that the idea of sending no troops across for a year has been modified, and that the Pershing expedition will be augmented by other forces before the expiration of a year.

By the end of a year the transport situation will be clarified it is felt, whether or not the submarine menace has been solved. Navy men, working on anti-submarine devices, however, believe they will get the "answer" to the submarine before long, and that this will simplify shipping problems entirely.

The Demand For Ships.

(From the N. Y. Times.)

Germany is beginning, unwillingly, to supply the ships we and our Allies need for ocean service. Two of those seized in our ports have been leased by the Government to France, two to Italy, and two to Russia. Many more will soon be ready for use, as the time required for repairs was over-estimated. Five sailing vessels, 12,500 tons in all, are already at work in the Pacific. The Shipping Board reports that the Ockenfels, a steel steamship of 5,000 tons, will be ready this week. On the 10th, five, nearly 30,000 tons, will be commissioned. Before the end of the month two, of 5,000 tons, will be added, and in July the number will be increased by ten, with a capacity of 59,000 tons.

All of these ships have new names. One of them is now called the Carl Schurz. Several have been brought to the Pacific Coast from Manila and Honolulu. Six of these will be used by the Pacific Mail Company, and they may help Russia by carrying across the ocean the great quantities of war supplies awaiting transportation from our west coast. These additions to our merchant marine, with others of the same kind that are to come when repairs are completed, may satisfy in part the emergency demand which has compelled large appropriations for new construction. Orders have been placed by the Government for nearly 100 ships, about two-thirds of them to be of wood, and lumber for many more of this kind will soon be bought. But completion of a new steel ship cannot be expected in less than five months, and it is said that the first of the wooden carriers will be ready in January. The President will be empowered by legislation to take for national service ships now under construction in American yards. On May 1 the number of these was 704, and 537 were steel, having a capacity of 2,039,000 tons. During the war our shipbuilding industry has shown remarkable growth. The capital stock for new companies or additions to old ones since the beginning of ruthless submarine piracy on Feb. 1 has been nearly $80,000,000. It may be necessary for the Government to draw from the great supply in the yards, where builders are working for European neutrals, our Allies, and American shipping companies. Probably a considerable number of these vessels can be obtained by friendly agreements with the owners. If we cannot afford to wait for the new ships whose keels are not yet laid, it is fortunate that what must be had can be found in our own shipyards.

Fashions and Fads.

The hemstitched handkerchief linen collars and cuffs are effective. White chiffon combined with black chantilly lace fashions a pretty frock. If the costume is severely tailored it should wear very dainty collars and cuffs.

Colors that never were put together before are fraternizing cheerfully now. Good taste and smartness are usually shown in a combination of black and white.
