Trace The Evil to Its Source

Baby Week is over, and it has served its purpose. The emergency hospital is an accomplished fact, public interest in the city's health has been aroused, and the response of citizens to the appeals for funds and supplies has been general and most generous. And now, what?

The object for which the Child Welfare Association and citizens are working is to raise the standard of health of the children in the community, and it follows as a matter of course, of the adult population also, and the questions which must be answered are, what are the main factors which tend to undermine their health and render them susceptible to disease, and how are these difficulties to be overcome? Bear in mind that the rich as well as the poor have to put up with the dust of the city, that the flies which breed in poisonous drains are no respectors of persons, that the foul air of the slums finds its way also into the palatial residences not far removed from them, and yet whatever epidemics are prevalent find their victims, for the most part in the homes of those who are poorly circumstanced.

These are the factors which must be considered and the reasons why such is the case are not far to seek. The command given nearly two thousand years ago, "FEED MY LAMBS," is explained more often than when referring to our spiritual welfare, but it surely has a practical application also, for did He not when circumstances arose act in a most practical manner and find food for the hungry? The vital need of the people today is for FOOD, CLOTHING, and FUEL, and because they are unobtainable by many in sufficient quantity, their families are left unprotected against the attacks of the diseases by which we are all surrounded.

Establish hospitals by all means, extend them if the circumstances are such as to demand it, but let us turn our attention to the source of the evil and direct our efforts towards making hospitals as far as possible unnecessary.

It is bodily nourishment that the people require, bodily comforts and comfortable houses, and of these they are deprived because the prices of essentials place them beyond their means. Charity does not meet the case; it merely adds to the evil, and should only be applied in cases of extremity. The cost of living must be brought down until it is possible for the humblest workman to purchase what is required in order to live in frugal comforts, and enable him at the same time to preserve his pride and his manhood.

Who is to blame for the existing condition of affairs? We ask ourselves this question and we yet are fully aware that the responsibility is our very own. It is known to all of us where profiteering has been going on, but what have those of us who could make his influence felt done to combat the profiteer who has amassed wealth at the expense of the health of the community? Have we not even heard of individuals whose fortunes have been made out of the excessive prices charged for goods supplied to public institutions? It has gone on for years and we have remained supine.

All the blame, however, cannot be laid at the door of the suppliers, but it still is ours. Governments have gone on strengthening the blockade which cuts us off from the markets of the world by high customs duties on the bare essentials of life, and again we have been passive in our attitude towards them. What care we so long as we can manage to make ends meet? Nothing! We take a greater interest in a movie than we do in the serious matters connected with an election, or we allow ourselves to be bamboozled by wordy orators, and pay no heed to his qualifications to act as a representative of the city or of a district. A football match or a dance will arouse the enthusiasm of the young generation, but in a matter of public importance they are apathetic.

What of the others? The mother denies herself of her share of the food in order to maintain the strength of the breadwinner. As prices go up, the amount of fuel is reduced; the supply of clothing gets less and less; repairs cannot be made to the house, and finally she too is driven by the children's cries for food to leave her family and seek work. The result is that home life is destroyed, the children are neglected, and soon fall easy victims to physical dangers and evil influences.

We are faced with a difficult proposition if we are really determined to bring about an improved condition of things. Today we are applying emergency measures to the evils that exist, and undoubtedly the efforts which we are making are commendable, but we must apply the axe to the very roots of the evil if we are to succeed in our campaign. All the influence that we possess must be brought to bear upon the authorities until they have cut overhead expenditure to the minimum in order to enable them to reduce the taxes. Our voices should be raised in protest against every case of profiteering that comes to our notice, and if our voices are unheeded let us use the means at our disposal, and which have been applied with effect elsewhere, to compel compliance with our just demands.

Admiral Field Expresses His Appreciation

Editor Evening Telegram.
 Sir,—I am directed to forward herewith copy of a letter received by His Excellency the Governor from Vice-Admiral, Sir F. Field, Commanding the Special Service Squadron, and copy of His Excellency's reply thereto. It is desired that these letters may be published in the next issue of your paper.

I have the honour to be, Sir,
 Your obedient servant,
 J. R. BENNETT,
 Colonial Secretary.

 H. M. S. "Hood",
 Special Service Squadron,
 At Topsall Bay,
 16th Sept., 1924.

Your Excellency,
 I desire, on behalf of the Captains, Officers and Ships' Companies of the Special Squadron, to express to you, and, through you, to the Government and people of Newfoundland, our most sincere thanks for the warm-hearted welcome and generous hospitality that we have received throughout our very pleasant stay. Although it was not possible for the Squadron, on account of the deep draught of the battle cruisers, to enter St. John's harbour, the excellent facilities for transport from Topsall Bay enabled officers and men to meet the people of St. John's. For these facilities our best thanks are due to the Government for arranging special trains and for allowing the personnel of the Squadron to make use of the railways entirely free of cost. We are also most grateful to all those private owners of motor cars who so generously provided transport. As a result of these greatly appreciated arrangements we were enabled to make a number of visits to the surrounding country and we have been very much impressed by its great natural beauty, its facilities for sport and its industrial possibilities. The fishing, for which Newfoundland is so famous, was keenly enjoyed and I desire to express my special thanks to the Government for advancing the shooting season by three days so that officers might have some shooting before the Squadron sails.

I shall be writing to the Prime Minister and also to Major Leonard Outerbridge, the Chairman of the Entertainment Committee, to thank them personally for all that has been done to make the visit so pleasant and enjoyable. In writing to the Chairman of the Entertainment Committee I shall ask him to convey our appreciation to all those who have extended such generous hospitality, especially to those who have accommodated officers in their private houses.

Finally I wish to thank Your Excellency for all the personal kindness which you and Lady Allardyce have shown to me and the officers and men of the Squadron. The officers and men who took part in the ceremonial march through St. John's were greatly honoured by your consenting to receive the salute from the naval brigade on that occasion. We shall leave Newfoundland with the happiest memories of a delightful visit.

I am addressing this letter to you now in view of your departure from St. John's to-morrow.

I have the honour to be, Sir,
 Your obedient servant,
 (Sgd.) F. FIELD,
 Vice Admiral Commanding Special Service Squadron.

[Copy] 17th September, 1924.

I have to acknowledge and thank you for your letter of yesterday's date and beg to assure you in reply that it will afford me much pleasure to convey to the Government and people of Newfoundland the very cordial expression of appreciation contained therein.

Ministers and Colonists alike agree that Newfoundland has been greatly honoured by the visit of the Special Service Squadron, and were gratified that at the ceremonial march through St. John's their Governor received the salute from the Naval Brigade. All who have been privileged to meet the Captains, Officers and Ships' Companies and to go aboard the Cruisers have come away impressed with the importance of maintaining the supremacy of the Royal Navy.

I do not hesitate to say that the value of the World Tour ought not to be computed either by the number of miles covered or the places visited but by the enthusiasm which the White Ensign on such magnificent ships has created in every British port, thereby strengthening those bonds of kinship and sympathy that make us a united people.

Newfoundlanders will never forget the visit of H.M.S. Hood, H.M.S. Repulse and H.M.S. Adelaide, and one and all wish you a safe voyage across the few intervening miles to the Mother Land.

I am, Sir,
 Your obedient servant,
 (Sgd.) W. L. ALLARDYCE,
 Governor.

Vice-Admiral,
 Sir Frederick L. Field, K.C.B., C.M.G.,
 Commanding Special Service Squadron, H. M. S. Hood.

Obituary.

DR. JOHN MURPHY, B.A.M.C.

We regret to announce that in spite of the unremitting attention of his relatives, brother physicians and attendants and the gallant fight made by the patient himself, Dr. John Murphy passed away at 5 o'clock this morning.

Stricken with infantile paralysis on the 10th of September, during the performance of his professional duties, Dr. Murphy remained conscious of his surroundings until three hours before the end came, and even, when possible, assisted those who were attending him. A week ago when his condition was considered critical the Sacred Rites of the Church were administered. The deceased was 32 years of age and was the youngest son of the Hon. J. J. and Mrs. Murphy. Educated at St. Bonaventure's College, he proceeded from that institution to Ampleforth College, Eng., and afterwards completed his course of study at the London Hospital Medical College and obtained his degree in 1916. War having broken out, he joined the Student Officers Training Camp and secured his commission upon graduation. He was sent out to Macedonia as medical officer with the Rifle Brigade and later was transferred to the medical unit on the Bulgarian front. He was on active service until the troops were demobilized when he returned to his native land and opened a practice in St. John's. Here he quickly gained a high reputation in the profession especially in surgical work. In 1913 he married Miss Elsie Kenway of Bristol, England, who with three children survives him, one boy and two girls, the youngest an infant.

The late Dr. Murphy's fight with death was anxiously watched by the whole community by whom he was highly esteemed, and the deepest sympathy is felt for his bereaved relatives. The funeral will take place on Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock from his late residence on Duckworth Street. A military funeral has been arranged, and six of his brother officers will act as pall bearers. Ex-service men of all ranks are also invited to attend.

I have sent a copy of the telegram to the Board of Trade here, and also to the Department of Agriculture & Mines and Marine & Fisheries. I shall be glad if you will kindly print the message in the next issue of your paper for general information. There may be some persons in Newfoundland who would be interested in the proposal, and led to make an experimental shipment.

Much interest taken in sample Newfoundland eel grass at Exhibition. Enquiries convinced this commodity would find ready sale in United Kingdom but in order ascertain suitability this market have recommended that large sample consignment of about five tons equal in quality to that on view at Wembley should be sent over. Brokers consider they could dispose of this five tons for ten pound per ton c.i.f. London, although do not guarantee this price as matter largely experimental. Am cabling this information in view advancing season in case interested parties may wish send further consignment this year.

PEPPYS BEHIND THE SCENES

Sept. 18th.—The city to-day in the deepest gloom, since the funerals do take place of those that were killed in the motor accident of Monday night. The naval funerals taking place in the morning, a great crowd of citizens to the City Hall to do honour to the two gallant officers. The parade a most impressive one, the coffins drawn on gun carriages and are draped with Ensigns. Sad to see the flags, swords and medals of the two officers resting on the coffins. Among those that do honor to them are the members of the Cabinet and the City Council, and also official representatives of other governments and organizations.

So to the funeral of Captain Whitty mightily impressive and is attended by the greatest crowd that did ever pay tribute to a former comrade. This indeed the saddest day that the city has known these many years and will be long remembered in sorrow by all who saw.

East Bound Express left Rails

REACHED CITY AT 12.30 TO-DAY.

The east bound express which left Port aux Basques Wednesday morning, comprised of two engines and nine cars met with a derailment at 3 p.m. yesterday at the 204th mile, four miles west of Arnold's Cove and as a result did not reach the city until 12.50 to-day. The accident occurred on a fairly level part of the road. The baggage car, diner, day coach, sleeper, and two second class cars left the rails, and sped over the ties several hundred feet before coming to a standstill. The cars remained upright, and were apparently undamaged, although the roadbed is somewhat torn-up as a result. The passengers and those of the train crew received a bit of a shaking up, but all escaped injury. The cause of the run-off is not known, but an official of the railway has proceeded to the scene to investigate. Following the derailment a wrecking train left Clarenville at 5 o'clock and arrived there three hours later. The work of placing the cars on the rails was carried out with despatch and by 3 o'clock this morning the train was able to proceed. Yesterday's west bound express was delayed five hours at Arnold's Cove as a result.

THE TRAINS.—The belated express reached the city at 12.50 p.m. Thursday's west bound express was delayed at Arnold's Cove five hours, due to the derailment of the east bound express, and did not leave Port Blandford until 2.30 this morning.

Magistrates Court

The city salesman who appeared before the Magistrate's Court about a week ago charged with embezzling certain money, the property of his employer, was before court this morning, and the case was withdrawn. The complainant, through his lawyer, made a motion to this effect, which was consented to by the court. Arrangements have been made between the two parties for a satisfactory settlement of the amount stolen.

A sailor charged with being drunk and disorderly and deserting his ship, was sent back under police escort. A second sailor, charged with being drunk and disorderly, was discharged.

A woman, without a home, was arrested by the police at an early hour this morning wandering about the streets. In court she was charged with being a loose and disorderly person, and the Judge had no other alternative left than to send her to the penitentiary for the next three months. After sentence had been passed she attacked the Constable who had arrested her in the open court, but the blows delivered had no effect. With the assistance of another policeman she was removed from the court room down the winding stairway to the cells below where she renewed the attack, but was safely landed behind the bars.

A motorist from Portugal Cove, charged with driving without having his car registered, was ordered to pay costs.

In the case of a motorist driving without a license sentence was suspended on payment of costs.
