

SELF-RAISED

BY EMMA D. M. SOUTHWORTH

"Ah, the Lord knows it was but little I could do."

"What you did do was vital to me, professor. My life was but a flame, in danger of dying out. You fed it with little chips, and kept it alive."

"And it burns great hickory logs now and warms the world," said the professor, looking proudly and fondly upon the fine young man before him.

"It shall at least warm and shelter your old age, professor. And whatever of prosperity the Lord accords me, you shall share."

As he said these words he turned an affectionate gaze on his retainer, and saw the tears rolling down the old man's cheeks.

"It was but a few, poor crumbs I cast upon the waters, that all this bread should come back to me after many days," he muttered in a broken voice.

"We were really very happy, professor, when we used to trudge the road together, plying our profession, but we are going to be much happier now, because our lives will be enlarged."

The professor smiled assent and they rode on.

They passed through Baymouth, where the professor directed his master's attention to the new signs of the mechanics who had taken his custom from him.

"But it is a true saying, sir, there was never one door closed but what there was another one opened. Many doors were closed against me at once; but just see what a broad, beautiful door you have opened to me, letting me into a glorious new life."

"Life is what we make of it, professor. To you, who will appreciate and enjoy every new thing in it, no doubt your new life will be happy," replied Ishmael.

And so conversing they passed through the town and entered the deep forest that lay along the shore of the river between Baymouth and Shelton.

They rode all the morning through the pleasant woods and stopped an hour at noon to rest and refresh themselves and their horses; and then resumed their journey and rode all the afternoon and arrived at Woodside just as the sun was setting.

As before, Reuben, Wam, Hannah, Sally, the children, and the dog, all rushed out to welcome Ishmael. Much astonished was Hannah to see her old friend, the professor, and much delighted to hear that he was going up to Washington to all the place of major domo to Ishmael. For Hannah shared the old woman's superstition, that the young man was never able to take care of himself, and notwithstanding that Ishmael had taken care of himself and her too, from the time he was eight years old, for years more, still she thought that he would be all the safer for having "an old head to look after him."

There was plenty of news to tell too.

As soon as the bounteous supper that Reuben and Hannah always provided for favored guests was over, and they were all gathered round the bright little wood fire that the capricious autumn weather rendered desirable, the budget was opened. Lord and Lady Vincent were to have an evening reception at Tanglewood.

And on the first of October they were to sail for Europe.

Lady Vincent was going to take three of the servants with her—old Aunt Katie, Jim and Sally.

Jim was to go as lady's footman, Sally as lady's maid; and old Aunt Katie in no, particular capacity, but because she refused to be separated from the two beings she loved the most in all the world.

She had nursed Miss Claudia and she was bound to nurse Miss Claudia's children, she said.

Lady Vincent had decided to take her, and was rather glad to do it. Lord Vincent, it was supposed, did not like the arrangement, and suggested the black servants as "gorillas," but Lady Vincent, it was confidently asserted, never deigned to consult his lordship, or pay any attention to his prejudices. And so matters stood at present.

All this was communicated to Ishmael by Reuben and Hannah, and in the midst of their conversation, in walked one of the subjects of their conversation—Aunt Katie.

She was immediately welcomed and provided with a seat in the chimney corner. She was inflated with the subject of her expected voyage and glowing with the importance of her anticipated office. She expatiated on the preparations in progress.

"But don't you feel sorry to leave your native home, Aunt Katie?" inquired Hannah.

"Who, me? No, 'deed. I takes my native home along with me when I takes Miss Claudia and Jim and Sally. I'm a living soul, I am and wats to see more of dis here world afore I goes hence and bees no more," said Katie, briskly.

Evidently Katie was a progressive spirit and would not have hesitated to emigrate to Liberia or any new colony where she could better herself or her children, and begin life afresh at fifty.

At last Katie got up to go, and bade them all a patronizing farewell.

Sally and Jim, who as usual was spending his evening with her, arose to accompany Katie.

And Ishmael took his hat and walked out after them.

Very much embarrassed they were at this unusual honor, which they could in no wise understand, until at length when they had gone some little way into the woods, Ishmael said:

"I hav' something to say to you three."

"Yes, sir," said Katie, speaking for the rest.

"Katie, you are acquainted with that nevelological mystery called presentiment, for I have heard you speak of it."
