THE DANGER OF DELAY.

If cholera is kept out of Canada, it will be more by chance than good management. The dilatoriness of the Minister of Agriculture has been scandalous, and calculated to injure Canadian railway interests. Only last week the International Quarantine Commission condemned the Quarantine station at Grosse Ile as inefficient. The objections to it are: 1. No wharf adequate for the safe and speedy landing of passengers and their effects and at which vessels may be disinfected. 2. No suitable disinfecting apparatus for either baggage, cargo or vessels. 3. No proper accommodation for the detention of suspects. 4. No adequate and safe water supply either for washing, bathing, drinking or other necessary purposes. Because of these defects in the quarantine arrangements, now alleged to be in the course of remedying, the United States authorities have threatened to protect their borders by establishing a vexatious quarantine of our railways at the international boundary. This would be most unfortunate. The international traffic is too valuable to be made sport of by lymphatic politicians, who seem never to be able to move till public opinion compels them to do their plainest of duties.

A COMPANION FOR MR. CARLING.

The London election deal has a counterpart in the Chicoutimi and Saguenay Dominion election race, of which full particulars are given in the Montreal Witness. Our contemporary, discussing the affair, says that "in spite of our stringent election law and the costly system of making up the voters' lists, scarcely an election takes place without flagrant trickery and corruption. The sanction given by the House of Commons to the action of Judge Elliot in the London case seems to have emboldened those who undertake to win elections for the Ministry. They hesitate at nothing, feeling satisfied that, no matter how nefarious their methods, they are sure of being not only acquitted but rewarded." This is how it was done, according to our usually well-informed contemporary: "Mr. Savard, the unseated member, had been elected as a Liberal, but turned over to the Conservatives after taking his seat. Sir Adolphe Caron, however, would have none of him, pushed the protest against his return, which was successful, and hence the new election. Mr. Savard again became a candidate, claiming to be a supporter of the Government, while Mr. Belley was nominated as the regular Conservative candidate. In order to place his election beyond a doubt, his friends disregarded the proclamation appointing polling places, and managed matters so that five parishes were practically disfranchised by having no provision made for recording votes. At Pointe aux Equimaux, on the Labrador coast, where the people have never before voted, and have never had their names placed on the electoral lists, and where no provisions for balloting have ever been made, voting was allowed under extraordinary circumstances."

It appears that the returning officer was advised by a prominent Conservative wire-puller that it would be necessary to establish a polling place at Pointe aux Equimaux, because there was a large vote there, and all for the Government candidate. Thereupon, "Dr. Tremblay, of Pointe aux Equimaux, was declared, whether legally or not, deputy returning officer, and he received instructions in a telegram signed 'J. G. Bergeron' to take a little wooden box, to prepare ballots in handwriting bearing the names of the three candidates, to administer the oath to himself, and when voting was over open the box, count the ballots and telegraph the result to the returning officer at Chicoutimi." Even then Dr. Tremblay found himself at a loss what to do as he had no voters' lists. He applied for instructions in reply, the authorship of which is disputed, telling him to be on the lists, "vote who you think should be on the lists." Dr. Tremblay, it seems, complied with these instructions, although evidently illegal, and when the ballots were counted Mr. Belley had 76 to 5 cast for Mr. Savard. With these votes the former has a majority of 22 in the whole constituency; without them, his opponent goes in by 48. Of course, Mr. Belley has been declared duly elected by the returning officer, and when the matter comes up in the House of Commons the rascals described will be solemnly sanctioned by a vote of the party in power. To such baseness have representative institutions been degraded in Canada.

There is a remedy, however, in this case unless the Government or its friends bribe their opponents into acquiescence with the illegality, or in some way block the action of the courts. An appeal from the decision of the deputy returning officer to the county judge lies in such a case as this, and it is probable there will be a recount before him, and if necessary a Judge Elliot on the Canadian bench, which does not seem likely, there can be no doubt as to what the decision of the court will be, for the law requiring voters' names to be on the lists is imperative, and the appointment of the deputy returning officer, his instructions and proceedings, are all irregular and invalid, or else our franchise law is a deception and a snare. In any case, however, the determination of the Government to resort to fraud, in order to win the elections is made plain, and it seems beyond a doubt that the Carons, the Haggarts, the Chaplains and the Dewdneys are the masters of the Government, so far as the campaign methods of the Administration are concerned.

TOPICS OF TODAY.

THE Hamilton Spectator's self-imposed mission is a rank failure. It is now certain that it is a bylaw to introduce the cholera into that city were placed before the people it would pass sure. The asylum on the hill will have to be enlarged if this diagnosis is to hold good.

VICE-PRESIDENT SHAUGHNESSY, of the C. P. R., says that President Van Horne and Mr. B. B. Oiler have not gone to Europe with the intention of negotiating for a fast steamship line to ply the Atlantic, but on totally different business. The public will now be kept guessing what that business is.

THE anti-Rome Rulers, of Toronto, would be delighted if the friends of Hon. Edward Blake were to fall out among themselves over the best means of entertaining the distinguished M. P. when he returns to his home in Toronto. We doubt not that the admirers of the honorable gentleman will have better sense.

THE Hamilton Herald, which supported the Dominion Government at last general election, joins in the revolts against the election of Sir John Thompson as successor to Premier Abbott, who, as already fore-shadowed in the ADVERTISER, may be expected to retire from public life within the next month or two. Our contemporary says: "It will hardly be argued that Sir John Thompson has turned out to be the fine, honorable man we all thought he was until the discovery was made that he was very strong in professions and very weak in practice. Every one admits his marked ability, but he does not hold that high place in the esteem of the public that he should hold. Still, he has proved to be less tricky than Sir Charles Tupper. Does any one imagine that the people of Canada would endorse either Thompson or Tupper at the next general election? The fact is Sir John Thompson had his chance and Sir Charles Tupper has his, while the public puts as much confidence in the integrity of Tupper as it does in the stability of a pattern in a kaleidoscope." Thus doth a candid friend holds forth.

According to a medical expert, it is a mistake to suppose that an attack of Asiatic cholera is accompanied with great pain. There are slight cramps in the action, calves of the legs, caused by reflex action, but the connection between these and the disease has not been determined. Death is caused directly by asphyxia brought about in consequence of vomiting and purging of the contents of the stomach and bowels, and the blood becomes very thick and refuses to circulate. An Italian physician, Dr. Cantani, has discovered what he considers a cure for cholera, and it is said to be used effectively at Hamburg. It has been cabled to this country and will be tried at New York, and doubtless in Canada, should the disease get a foothold on our shores. The curative agent is nothing but the injection of a weak solution of salt and water into the veins in the proportion of one part of salt to 7,000 of water. The water is heated to the temperature of the human body and injected into the veins in small quantities. A solution of tannin is also used as an emetic. This tends to stop the diarrhoea and produces coagula in the intestines, while salt and water thus will again. Ememas of brandy and water will be used to stimulate the patients. No medicine can be given by the mouth, as the almost constant vomiting renders this useless.

INTERNATIONAL TROUBLES.

New Plan of Retaliation Discussed in the Dominion.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—A Canadian gentleman visiting Washington, who evidently knows a great deal about the navigation of the great lakes, said that a new system of retaliation has been quietly discussed in Toronto and Ottawa, which may be carried into effect if the United States continues the embargo upon Canadian commerce passing through the Soo canal. "Navigators of the St. Mary River," said this gentleman, "are as much dependent upon the landmarks on the Canadian side as they are upon those on the American side for steering guides. It is a fact well known to every man at all familiar with the route between Lakes Superior and Huron that a series of range targets is maintained on each shore. These targets are placed in narrow lanes cut through the underbrush, and they have become absolutely essential to the safe navigation of the tortuous channel. The brush grows rapidly, and unless constantly cut will soon cover the targets. Now, suppose the Canadian Government refuses further permission to maintain these targets. The result will be that American vessels and not Canadian craft will be the losers, for with your 'Soo' tolls Canadian vessels are practically driven out of the upper lake trade."

Commander Collin, of the light-house board, when his attention was called to this matter, said: "There is no question that such a step might be taken and it would prove embarrassing to the lake trade. But within a few years we hope to have the pathway across Georgian Bay, through Lake Huron, the Hay Lake and St. Mary's channels so well lighted and marked that we shall be practically independent of the Canadians. It is true, however, that at present we are dependent in a measure upon Canadian territory."

THE SLAVE SHIP.

Two of the Survivors Subsist on Human Flesh.

Hope that Mr. Skinner, an Oxford Eoy, Has Escaped.

AWFUL SUFFERINGS OF A PORTION OF THE CREW—MADNESS AND SUICIDE—WELCOME RAIN BRINGS RELIEF TO THE FAMISHED REMNANT.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 6.—At least two of those who sailed from Drake's Bay in the ill-fated slave brig Tahiti were saved, if the story told by Leon Martell is true. Martell arrived in San Francisco last Friday from the coast above Manzanilla, where he said he found two of the Tahiti's crew. The men were alive, but their sufferings had been horrible.

One of the men was a Russian Finn named Johansen, and the other was a Gilbert Islander. The latter told him that they were on board the Tahiti when she was captured, and that with four others they managed to make their escape in a small boat. The brig capsized in a heavy sea at night and was bottom up inside of five minutes after the squall struck her. The minutes after the squall struck her. The minutes after the squall struck her. The minutes after the squall struck her.

Johansen says that he was on deck at the time and sprang for the boats as the vessel went over. Four others, a woman and three men, all Gilbert Islanders, climbed into the boat. They had neither food nor water and only three oars. When daylight came they were out of sight of the brig and thought she had gone down.

On the fourth day after leaving the brig the woman died and the rest of the party were forced to eat portions of her body to keep themselves alive. The sufferings of the castaways in the little boat were terrible. For the first few days after leaving the brig it blew a hard gale and the men had all they could do to prevent the boat from swamping.

Several heavy showers of rain fell, but it did them little good, as what fell in the boat or was caught in their clothing was so mixed with the spray that constantly flowing over them that it was of no use to quench their thirst. After the storm abated the sun came out and beat down on the unfortunate castaways with tropical force and they suffered terrible tortures from thirst.

On the tenth day one of the islanders took to drinking salt water, and soon went raving mad, and that night he ended his sufferings by plunging into the sea. They had no idea in what direction they were drifting, and during the entire time they were in the boat, not a single sail was sighted. Another of the islanders was taken sick on the twelfth day, and died two days subsequently. The body was cast overboard, and the two survivors lay in the little craft waiting for the death that seemed not far off.

It rained heavily that night, and the little boat was soon half full of water and the two men drank of the precious fluid until it seemed as if they would die. When daylight came the remains of the woman's body were thrown overboard, and their hunger with such repulsive food. On the morning of the 20th, sixteen days after leaving the ill-fated brig, the boat was cast ashore, and more dead than alive the two men crawled out of her and lay down on the beach.

They were carried to the huts of some fishermen near by, and it was there that they were found by Martell. The islander had recovered from his terrible experience, but Johansen was still sick. Whether his illness was due to his exposure in the boat or not Martell could not state.

Martell is a Mexican with little or no education, and who has no fixed residence, but his story may be true, and if so, it shows that at least two men escaped the terrible disaster that overtook the brig and sent fully 400 human beings into eternity.

It will be remembered that the Tahiti sailed from Drake's Bay on Sept. 8 of last year with a cargo of Gilbert Islanders, bound for some port in Guatemala. Nothing was seen or heard of the vessel until she was sighted, bottom up, near the Lizard Point by the steamer Roseville some time in the latter part of October.

[The Tahiti, alluded to in the foregoing dispatch, was the vessel upon which young Skioner, a nephew of Col. Skinner, of Woodstock, sailed. It has been supposed that he and the entire crew and human cargo were lost. The discovery of two survivors will, however, revive the hope that Mr. Skinner has also escaped with his life.]

SUES FOR $4,000,000.

A New Yorker Demands That Sum From a Bank.

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—Henry M. Potter, as trustee, has brought suit in the Supreme Court against the United States National Bank, Logan C. Murray, Evan G. Sherman and John E. McCook for $4,000,000. The suit is another phase of the trouble which resulted in the placing of the Bankers' and Merchants' Telegraph Company in the hands of a receiver.

Prior to May 15, 1884, it is contended, A. W. Dimock, of A. W. Dimock & Co., bankers, at No. 2 Wall street, was a principal stockholder of the Bankers' and Merchants' Telegraph Company, which had a capital stock of $8,000,000. Over $4,000,000, it is alleged, was expended in getting the line in working order.

In April, 1884, A. W. Dimock & Co. borrowed $500,000 from the United States National Bank, agreeing to repay the money on Aug. 18, 1884. As collateral the company pledged 200 shares of stock of the Bankers' and Merchants' Telegraph Company, 200 shares of stock of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, and $20,000 in first mortgage bonds of the United States National Bank. This was considered to be ample security, and it was claimed there was no warrant for calling the liquidation of the loan, or the appropriation or sale by the bank of any of the securities.

Notwithstanding this fact, it is alleged the defendants, with a view of destroying the credit of A. W. Dimock & Co. and of impairing the market value of the telegraph company's stocks and bonds and precipitating ruin upon that corporation, conspired to demand the repayment of the loan and to sell the securities.

The demand was made but not met, and the stocks and bonds were sold cheaply at public auction. It is contended that this action caused the failure of A. W. Dimock & Co. and the sacrifice of the telegraph company.

The firm's total loss, it is said, was $4,000,000. The alleged conspiracy was not disclosed by A. W. Dimock & Co. until June, 1890. A year later A. W. Dimock transferred his claim and right of action to his brother, A. W. Dimock. Subsequently the entire claim was bought by the present plaintiff.

"German Syrup"

Here is an incident from the South—Mississippi, written in April, 1890, just after the Grippe had visited that country. "I am a farmer, one of those who have to rise early and work late. At the beginning of last Winter I was on a trip to the City of Vicksburg, Miss., where I got well drenched in a shower of rain. I went home and was soon after seized with a dry, hacking cough. This grew worse every day, until I had to seek relief. I consulted Dr. Dixon who has since died, and he told me to get a bottle of Boschee's German Syrup. Meantime my cough grew worse and worse and then the Grippe came along and I caught that also very severely. My condition then compelled me to do something. I got two bottles of German Syrup. I began using them, and before taking much of the second bottle, I was entirely clear of the Cough that had hung to me so long, the Grippe, and all its bad effects. I felt tip-top and have felt that way ever since."
