"You have nothing to do with this. This is my salary.' The dispatch to the Lookout was much enjoyed. Its tenor was that while the writer had gone to Africa to avoid any semblance of interfering in the Taft administration, still he had a few ideas he desired to express, and perhaps it would be well for Mr. Taft to heed them. The dispatch followed President Roosevelt's style bristled with phrases he uses. The second typewriter broke down with a loud whir in the middle of this dis-
