AEMIILIUS JARVIS

Yachtsman, Horseman, Financier, Amateur Athlete—All Round Man

Of Aemilius Jarvis, the Toronto financier and yachtsman, two appreciations have been expressed of which any man might be proud. Sir Geo. W. Ross on one occasion referred to him as "Aemilius's friend," while on another occasion he was very truly described by one who knew him well as "a sportsman—always whether he wins or loses."

He was born in York County in 1859 and was educated at Upper Canada College. In 1876, when but 16 years of age, he was permitted by his parents to go to sea. In that year nine Canadian vessels were chartered to carry timber from Lake Michigan to England and young Jarvis shipped on one of these vessels, the "Edward Blake," a three-masted schooner, in the capacity of "his-bodied" seaman before the mast. Going aboard at St. Catharines he went with the boat to Cheboygan, Michigan, where the cargo of timber was obtained, and then set sail for London. The voyage from Quebec to London took just a days.

Returning home Mr. Jarvis entered the service of the Bank of Hamilton in 1877, and until 1892 he was identified with the banking business. In that year he started business as banker and broker, his firm rapidly becoming recognized as one of the most conservative financial houses in Canada.

During the time that Aemilius Jarvis has been responsible for the financing of many prominent companies, including the diversified interests as the Toronto Hotel Company, which built the Hotel Edward Hotel, the Hamilton S. and Iron Co., the Niagara, St. Catharines and Toronto Railway, Bonanza Limited, the Aemilius Jarvis & Co., Canadian Locomotive Company, and numerous other industrial concerns.

To Mr. Jarvis was allotted the difficult task of attempting to save the Sovereign Bank from wreck when it was already on the rocks, or, failing in this, the impossible task of salvaging the wreck. Many people wondered how it came about that Mr. Jarvis assumed command of the Sovereign Bank and but few know that it was really J. Pierpont Morgan who sought Mr. Jarvis and persuaded him to act. The "Sovereign" had become quite heavily indebted to stockholders in the bank, and when one day they suddenly found things were not as they should be, they looked upon Mr. Jarvis as a man who had become quite heavily interested in stockholders in the bank, and when one day they suddenly found things were not as they should be, they looked upon Mr. Jarvis as a man who had become quite heavily interested in stockholders in the bank.

From the time that Aemilius Jarvis made his first voyage in 1876 he has been continually devoted to the water. He has been a member of the R. Y. Canadian Yacht Club since 1885, and has served as Commodore for several terms. During his career Mr. Jarvis has personally sailed his own boats, and won over 500 races. He has been associated with practically all the international yacht races on the Great Lakes, and on a number of occasions has sailed the Canadian boat.

Mr. Jarvis is a most enthusiastic horseman, and his collection of horse show ribbons is one to be envied. In his younger days he took a very keen and active interest in all kinds of athletics, and has more than once captured championships. In 1882 he was the reigning champion at Campbell Bay, Barrie. In 1879, when the Marquis of Lorne visited Hamilton the Canadian Athletic Association games were held there and Mr. Jarvis won the championship in the quarter mile race.

He was chosen "Ellis's" leader of the Senate in succession to the late Sir Richard Cartwright.

Saved by His Muscles. Alfred Looney, a well-known football player, accidentally shot himself in the leg with his 33-calibre rifle while hunting near Cobalt. The bullet entered the thigh, but was deflected by the remarkable development of the muscles, brought about by his football playing, and the wound did not prove a serious one.

New Use for Thorns. Very sharp thorns can be used successfully as phonograph needles. These substitutes will reproduce sound very clearly and with beautiful tone. The harsh scratching of the ordinary needle is reduced to a minimum, and the thorn is not injurious to the record.

For the Bath-tub. An English inventor has combined a rubber brush and soap dish and has given it a vacuum cup on the bottom to hold it upright when used for the latter purpose.

A Household Hint. If one quart of one per cent. of potassium permanganate is added to the water with which plaster of Paris is mixed, the plaster will harden sooner and it will be stronger.

WALKED 5,000 MILES

Through Africa, From Capetown to Cairo on Foot

Amid thronging dangers a historic walk of 5,000 miles across Africa was accomplished, by Emil Lund, a Rhodesian settler, thirty-six years of age.

Lund walked from Cape Town to Cairo, not in fulfillment of a wager, or without money, or to test a system of diet or training, but simply from love of adventure. He has been a soldier and scout since he was seventeen.

"My wish," he said, in telling the story of his great walk, "was simply to be the first man to accomplish the feat. I am proudest of having walked across the Nubian Desert. That was the hardest tramp of all."

Until he left Ellersburgh, in the Belgian Congo, he had a comparatively easy time, for he could obtain supplies, good food, and good water, but beyond that point he had a very trying time. He had no porters, carrying all his own baggage which weighed about 70 pounds.

During most of the time Mr. Lund was obliged to be a vegetarian, but he always ate meat when he could get it.

"Sometimes," he said, "I shot a buck; but I could only eat the liver, which I broiled in the ashes of my fire. Having no salt, I cannot say that I enjoyed my food. In passing through the great forests I camped on the ground, lighting a large fire to keep off the wild animals. I had to be very careful to keep this going throughout the night."

"At early dawn I renewed my march, tramping continuously still about eleven o'clock. After that I used to hunt round, collect wood, and cook my own daily meal. Then I slept all undisturbed."

"Lions and other carnivores do not usually attack in the heat of the day. They are asleep, and it is only when night falls that they set out in search of prey."

He met with a good many lions, but was never attacked by one. The idea that water will protect one from lions is, he says, erroneous, for lions are excellent swimmers.

In the Katanga district he was bitten by a black snake, and would probably have died, but he reached a native kraal, and was treated by a woman, who applied a decoction of herbs to the wound, and cured him.

One of the worst troubles with which Mr. Lund had to contend was the venomous flies and insects which swarm in tropical Africa.

He was bitten near the eye by a certain kind of malignant tick, and for a time was nearly blind.

In the course of his walk he fell in with the Baluba and Valesi cannibals. When they have a cannibal feast the victim is usually a man accused of some crime. In such a case the man is offered a draught of a poisonous decoction.

If he takes a long drink the poison is inoperative, producing merely nausea. But if, from timidity or guilt he drinks but a small portion, the effect is almost immediately fatal. Men are excluded from these feasts. Reaching Khartoum after crossing the Nubian Desert, Mr. Lund went into the hospital to watch his recovery after the last stage of his journey which he completed without further mishap.

UNHAPPY DIPLOMATS

The Turkish Government used at one time to make foreign envoys in Constantinople conform in some degree to Mussulman customs. They were not allowed to appear in public accompanied by their wives, as the practice might have caused heart-burning among the native women, but could never hope to be treated on an equality with their husbands.

Endeavors were also made at one time to extend Mohammed's prohibition of wine to foreign diplomats. This was found impossible, but until the end of the eighteenth century all the wine consigned to them had to be conveyed from the harbor in the dark of the night, so that the faithful should not be contaminated by seeing the accursed liquor.

DOGS CAUGHT FIRE-BUG

Bloodhounds Used in England for Midnight Man-hunt.

For two years an epidemic of fires in South-east Hampshire kept the residents of the district in a state of panic. Sometimes there was as many as five in a week. They were evidently incendiary, but despite all efforts the author could not be trapped. Recently, however, a young lawyer named Benjamin Chant was taken into custody under dramatic circumstances. A hay stack was discovered afire on the farm of Mr. F. J. Holt, and hundreds of people rushed to the spot, but were stopped by the firemen, who formed a wide cordon round the spot, while two bloodhounds were brought up on a leash.

With noses close to the ground they went slowly round the rick. Presently they picked up a hot scent, and made off over open country, dragging their keeper behind them, until they reached the old-time village of Westbourne. The trail took them to the back door of a house where Chant lived. The dogs scraped the closed door.

It was two o'clock in the morning, and Chant was in bed. He was brought down and made to stand in the middle of the road with eight other men, and the dogs were allowed to come up from a distance of 500 yards, and they instantly went up to him.

King Boxes Carter's Ears. While King Alfonso of Spain was recently motoring with the Queen in the outskirts of Madrid he saw a drunken carter brutally ill-treating his falcon horse. The King alighted and helped the animal to rise, and then vigorously boxed the driver's ears, saying as he left, "Now you may go to the King and tell him I have chastised you."
