THIS WOMAN'S RECOVERY

Shows Remarkable Restorative Power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Chester, Ont.—"Before using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was a total wreck. I had terrible pains in my sides and was not regular. Finally I got so weak I could not go up stairs without stopping to rest half way up the steps. I tried two doctors but they did me no good. I saw your medicine advertised in the newspapers and thought I would give it a trial. I took four bottles of the Vegetable Compound and was restored to health. I am married, am the mother of two children, and do all my housework, milk eight cows, and do a hired man's work and enjoy the best of health. I also found Vegetable Compound a great help for my weak back before my babies were born. I recommend it to all my friends who are in need of medicine, and you may print this letter if you wish."

Mrs. HENRY JANKE, R. R. No. 4, Chester, Ontario.

It hardly seems possible that there is a woman in this country who will continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial after all the evidence that is continually being published, proving beyond contradiction that this grand old medicine has relieved more suffering among women than any other medicine in the world.

Good News For BRONCHITIS Sufferers

FAMOUS DOCTOR ENDORSES PEPS

"Peps are exceptionally suited for the treatment of bronchial ailments; their peculiar composition, their direct influence on the membranes of the bronchi, and their freedom from risky narcotics, being among their many praiseworthy points."

DR. GORDON STABLES.

These chilly wet November days, when the old bronchial cough shows signs of return, and the chest feels raw and tender, it is important to have handy a box of Peps. They treat chest trouble in the only direct scientific way.

You breathe the Peps medicine, and it penetrates where ordinary medicines cannot. As Peps tablets dissolve in the mouth, the ether inhaled with every breath rich balsamic pine essence with other volatile medicine. This air-like Peps medicine carries comfort and healing into the chest; it soothes the sore inflamed alveoli; frees the breathing; loosens phlegm; allays the cough, and relieves the painful tight feeling around the lungs.

Peps are the safest and most valuable remedy ever discovered for throat and chest. With them you can defy coughs and colds, chills and other throat and chest troubles. 50c. box, all dealers.

PEPS THE REMEDY YOU BREATHE

Makes Breathing Easy.—The constriction of the air passages and the struggle for breath, too familiar evidence of asthmatic trouble, cannot daunt Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy. This is the famous remedy which is known for and wide for its complete effectiveness even under very severe conditions. It is no untried, experimental preparation, but one with many years of strong service behind it. Buy it from your nearest dealer.

A Corrector of Pulmonary troubles. Many testimonials could be presented showing the great efficacy of Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil in curing disorders of the respiratory processes and the Oil is recommended to all who suffer from these disorders with the certainty that they will find relief. It will allay inflammation in the bronchial tubes.

When Sham Became Real

By ROY BAKER

(By 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"You've got to be a success professionally, my boy, before you can marry my girl. It's all right about your having plenty of money in your own name, but three square meals a day isn't everything I ask of my son-in-law."

"But, Mr. Jenkins, it's only two months since I got my license to practice and I have a few patients already. Besides, I just know I'm going to make good. I love the work and graduated at the head of my class, and down in the slums I've had quite a success," Kingston ended earnestly.

"All the same, I've said my say. There's no such great hurry about your marrying my girl—Claire isn't twenty-one yet, you know."

"I guess that's final?" the young man said as he rose to go.

"I'm afraid so, Kingston; nevertheless, I'll be glad to welcome you into the family when you're a little further along."

With a heavy heart the doctor left Jenkins' office and turned his car toward his home, for he knew Claire would be there anxiously waiting for him, as they had planned this interview with the father as a last resort. Kingston thought with bitterness what a failure he had to give.

"Never mind, Frank," she consoled, after she had heard the worst, "we'll do something to bring dad around somehow."

"But what?" the man asked desperately. "I've done my level best and I can't think of another thing to try."

"Let me do some thinking," said Claire, puckering her pretty white forehead with the effort. "Dad told me the other day he was going to drop in on you from time to time. If we could only get a good showing of patients for that psychological moment!"

"Yes, if," he answered listlessly, "but how?"

"I don't know. Let me see, I feel as if I had an idea coming."

"If that's the case, honey, I'd better get out and give you a chance to concentrate."

"All right and I'll ring you if anything occurs to me."

As Doctor Kingston reached his office he heard the telephone ringing and his heart leaped with joy at the prospect of a professional call. He took up the receiver and, said "Hello!" in his most business-like tone. It was Claire.

"Frank, I've got an idea. Do come over and let me tell you about it."

"Be there in a jiffy," he said as he hung up the receiver and dashed for the door, and a few minutes later he had reached the Jenkins home.

"Tell me, Claire, quick for goodness' sake!"

"Sit down, dear," she said, enjoying the moment. "You're so excited."

"All right. Now shoot."

"Well, from what I learned in psychology human beings are monkeys, sheep; in a word, imitators."

"Yes, yes, but what's that got to do with it?"

"Wait a minute, now. To go on, you were awfully popular in your class. Now, if you had a lot of patients you'd have a lot more, because people are like sheep and they always flock to a popular doctor."

"But how to get them," he groaned.

"In the next place, you were popular at school and your college mates would do anything on earth for you."

"Sure! Do put the puzzle together now."

"Very well. Suppose you went out to the school, took your best friends into your confidence, told them how determined dad is and then made a speech something like this—'Claire rose and addressed an imaginary audience:

"Friends, knowing the situation, it is obvious to you that I must have my reception room filled with patients, sham, hogus or real, so that dad-in-law-to-be will be impressed. Now, if there are any students here who would like to drop into my office while up town they will be conferring a great favor and in return will receive 50 cents for all young men, all men over forty $1, and all women students 75 cents an hour."

Claire sat down, breathless and red-checked.

"I wonder," he exclaimed, rubbing his chin. "You know, I believe that might work, and the more I think of it the better it sounds."

"Do let's try it, anyway, Frank," she begged.

"I'd try anything on earth, honey. And lots of those students would be blessed glad to make the money. I know. I'll start the ball rolling tonight."

Two weeks later Mr. Jenkins decided he'd drop in on his prospective son-in-law and see how things were getting along. As he glanced quickly around the reception room he was surprised to see six men and one woman sitting around anxiously awaiting their turn. A moment later Doctor Kingston opened the door of the inner office and ushered a patient out.

"Next!" he said in his most professional tones; then his eye caught sight of Mr. Jenkins, apparently for the first time.

"Why, how are you, Mr. Jenkins?" he smiled going over to greet him. "I'll be able to see you in just a minute," and he beckoned into the consulting room and closed the door on another "patient."

A few minutes later the two reappeared, the patient carefully folding a prescription blank on which was written: "This entitles A. S. Stillman to 50 cents."

"I'm sure that'll help you," said the doctor patting him on the back.

"I'm sure it will, too," replied the patient earnestly.

Some weeks later Kingston's phone rang and upon taking down the receiver he recognized Jenkins' voice.

"Come up to the office this afternoon," it said. "I want to speak to you."

"All right, sir, but I'm afraid it'll be pretty late before I can get off."

"I'll wait for you," and Kingston heard the receiver go up at the other end.

At about six o'clock he walked into Jenkins' office.

"I've decided you can have her now, if she's willing," said the elder man.

"Thank you, sir," replied Kingston, gratefully. "I'll try to persuade her."

"I'll have to tell you, young man, that I'm more than pleased with the way your practice has grown. I've dropped in several times for a second when you were in the inner office and found your reception room always full."

"It was Claire who inspired me," said Kingston, naïvely.

That evening Claire said in rapture, "I just knew it would work, Frankie, dear."

"But the fact is, my practice is actually growing very fast," he answered.

"And I'm really curing them. One old lady told me this afternoon she felt better than she had in years."

"And here's a young lady who can tell you the same thing," laughed Claire, as she crept a little closer into his arms.

HERMIT'S LIFE TOO SEVERE

Wealthy Englishman Unable to Find Man Who Would for Long Maintain Required Pose.

The grounds of Pain's hill, near Cobham, Surrey, were considered a marvelous achievement of landscape gardening when first laid out during the ownership of the ninth duke of Hamilton. The head gardener, who was given a free hand, produced a bewildering variety of supposed amenities—grottoes, cascades, chapels, temples, and even a hermitage.

When the job was finished the noble owner of Pain's hill advertised for a hermit willing to live there seven years. It was stipulated that he should wear a camel robe, never cut his beard or nails, and never stray beyond the limits of the grounds. He was to sleep and eat in the hermitage, a mat serving as his bed, and food (washed down solely with water) being sent him from the house. He was strictly forbidden to exchange a syllable with any servant or to speak to anyone who visited the hermitage. If he lived there the full term of seven years under these restrictions he was to receive 700 guineas ($3,500), but he was liable to instant dismissal without any payment if found departing from the regime laid down for hermits.

The advertisement attracted several applicants, one of whom was selected; but he fled at the end of three weeks and henceforth the hermitage was untenanted.
