

PRELUDE.

THE world is full of utterings; speech
As breath is, to the soul;
Each unto all, or all for each—
Their waves together roll.

And one more matters little; then
Behold! its breathings pass:
Another shade, in sight of men,
Flits over churchyard grass.